Meat and Poison.
A Shocking Crime.
Washington's Witch Broth.
Why Not Keep Our Gold?

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

ONE MAN'S poison is another man's meat, the more deadly the poison, the richer the meat.

There was a brisk rally in Wall Street prices yesterday. Steel common rose three dollars a share. Steel preferred nine dollars on news that wages of steel workers had again been reduced, this time by fifteen per cent. When there is less for those that work, there is more for those that own stock certificates. However, lower wages are better than no job, and the steel company had no choice.

STOCK PRICES rose generally and there was what big business calls "a better feeling generally," when news came that the Ways and Means Committee had voted against the soldiers' bonus fifteen to ten.

This writer, subject to correction by the wise, believes that nothing could be better for big business and all business than to pay the soldiers their bonus now, since it must be paid eventually, with interest.

The soldiers would put the two thousand million dollars in circulation promptly, in every part of the country, bills would be paid, clothes, automobiles bought, cheerfulness increased, while the government would save eighty million dollars a year in interest charges.

THE SOLDIERS, and no other agency, could put the money in circulation and start a buying wave. The government, through the reconstruction committee, hands hundreds of millions to banks and other corporations. Do they put the money in circulation? Do they spend it and help business? They sit on it, like old Fafner, on his Rhinegold, hoarding it.

Refusal to pay soldiers, to whom government, rightly or wrongly, has promised the money, will cause much bitterness and establish a dissatisfaction, not easily cleared up.

THE MURDER of President Doumer of the French republic, inflicts upon the people of France a sorrow, shared by the whole world.

President Doumer, whose great popularity made it possible for him to defeat the powerful Briand for the presidency, was described by Lloyd George as "an attractive speaker, an able and experienced administrator of unblemished integrity, with an honorable career."

The loss of his sons in the war had endeared their president to the people of France. They looked upon him as typifying the finest qualities of the French race.

MANY AMERICANS, hearing that three bullets were fired into the excellent French president by a Russian will exclaim:

"Those murderous bolsheviks."

It happens, however, that this Russian, Paul Gorguloff, is no bolshevik, but a White Russian praying for the return of the czars and an end of Stalin. The murderous fanatic boasts that he came to Paris from Monaco, to kill Doumer, because France had refused to attack and drive out the Soviet government.

THE WITCHES' cauldron in Macbeth would seem commonplace, compared with the political cauldron boiling over in Washington.

Senator Norris (Rep.), from Nebraska, says he will join Senator Huey Long, from New Orleans, and vote for Gov. Roosevelt, a Democrat. But there is a big "if" involved there.

Nebraska Republican voters like their radical senator but while indorsing him, they also indorse President Hoover.

THE PRESIDENT sends to Congress a message of rebuke that delights the Republicans and fills the Democrats with virtuous rage. The president tells Democrats they make no use of their power and in consequence, the country is filled with "fear and alarm."

Senator Robinson, who leads Democrats in the Senate, resents this, although he cannot show that Democrats have actually done anything except upset plans.

SENATOR REED says a Mussolini is needed at this time and millions of Americans that see no signs of constructive ability or leadership are inclined to agree with him.

However, you do not find a Mussolini among our type of leaders—graduates of rural law offices or shoals of trust company vice presidents. Mussolini came up through REAL RADICALISM, through hardship inconceivable, including imprisonment and hard service as a common soldier in the trenches of the big war.

When he speaks Italians know it is the voice of a man who knows the people. You may need a bull dog, but you can't make it out of a white rabbit.

THE MOST interesting invention of our depression is the Goldsborough bill, sweeping aside old "sound banking ideas," passed by the House by an overwhelming vote 289 to 60.

Spoken of in some quarters as planned to "restore the purchasing power of the dollar," it is actually planned to diminish the dollar's purchasing power, putting up prices of products by making dollars more plentiful.

IF THE PLAN back of the bill should succeed, prices would go back to the average price level of the years 1921 to 1929. The bill orders the Federal Reserve to bring this about. Eugene Meyer, Jr., able head of the Federal Reserve, says he does not like to be told suddenly,

LINDY AIDE IN HUNT HERE

Breckinridge Disappears After Arrival by Plane; Secrecy Marks Operations

Col. Henry S. Breckinridge, legal adviser of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and one of the leaders in the search for the kidnaped Lindbergh baby, was apparently somewhere in the Pittsburgh district today.

It was believed that he came here following clues to the whereabouts of the child, although this was denied by Col. N. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the New Jersey state police.

Maj. J. T. Lanphier, famous aviator, flew Breckinride from New Jersey to the City-County Airport, landing there at 5:20 p. m., Pittsburgh time, yesterday.

BRECKINRIDGE VANISHES

Breckinridge, giving his name as Brown, hurried from the plane with a field attend[illegible], his bag, jumped into a waiting sedan and sped away.

Half a block from a downtown hotel, the Lindbergh counsel left the automobile. He disappeared into the crowds and no trace has been found of him since.

A careful check of all hotels revealed that no one by the name of Breckinridge or by the name of Brown, and answering his description, was registered.

It was believed that he was endeavoring to carry on his negotiations or search here with the same secrecy that has marked the last few weeks of the hunt for the 22-month-old Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr.

Maj. Lanphier refused to discuss his passenger. He had his plane refueled and took off at once, saying he was going to Louisville for the Kentucky Derby.

RUMORS DISSIPATED

Rumors of a co-operative movement by state and federal authorities in a search of Cambria County "underworld" hangouts for trace of the missing baby were dissipated today. The federal authorities and state police moved into Cambria County as reports reached here of Col. Breckinridge's departure for Pennsylvania from New Jersey.

Deputy Prohibition Administrator Robert S. Krause, who denied

Will Confuses Auto With Broncs; Freed

BEVERLY HILLS, May 7.—(AP)—Will Rogers, having failed to appear in court on a speeding charge, sent his attorney today to explain to the judge.

In effect, the attorney said that the cowboy-humorist not being familiar with speedometers because cow ponies don't have them, thought he was on the hurricane deck of a bronc while trying out a new motor car and neglected to look at the gadget. And the judge, saying he didn't believe Will intended to break the law anyway, suspended a five dollar fine.

FUNERAL CROWDS FOR MRS. COX

PROCESSION TODAY INTO OLD ST. PATRICKS . . . . ONE OF FOUR SIMULTANEOUS MASSES

4 MASSES SAID FOR MRS. COX

Four masses were celebrated simultaneously in crowded Old St. Patrick's Church today for Mrs. Julia Mason Cox, 66, mother of the Rev. James R. Cox, pastor of the church and idol of jobless thousands.

In the throng were the friends and neighbors from the Lawrenceville district, political and civic leaders, and many priests of the Pittsburgh diocese. Outside the church when the services began at 9:30 a. m. were approximately 2,000 who could not gain admittance.

The Rev. Father William Slattery, of East Pittsburgh, was celebrant of the solemn requiem mass and later preached the sermon. The Rev. Martin Brennan, of Brownsville, was deacon; the Rev. Dr. Paul Campbell, superintendent of diocesan schools, sub-deacon, and the Rev. J. C. Fallon, Knoxville master of ceremonies.

In the Grotto, the Rev. Father Cox said mass for his mother, while at the altar to the left the Rev. C. J. Coyne, of St. Mary's, and at the right the Rev. John McKavney, of Smithton, said mass.

Interment was made in Calvary Cemetery.

All France Mourns For Slain President

Doumer Burial Rites Arranged for Thursday

By WILLIAM PARKER
International News Service.

PARIS, May 7.—France was a sorrowing nation today, with flags everywhere draped with black for President Paul Doumer, victim of the second presidential assassination in French history.

The 75-year-old statesman, after a tenacious 14-hour fight for life, which was typical of his character, died at 4:37 a. m., from bullet wounds received yesterday at the hands of a Russian fanatic.

Doumer will be buried Thursday in the Pantheon beside such immortals as Voltaire, Hugo and Rousseau.

President Doumer was almost universally regarded as the personification of French patriotism because of his brave attitude toward the loss of four of his sons in the World War.

The 4,000,000 inhabitants of Paris and thousands elsewhere in France, who through radio and extra editions of newspapers kept close watch on the President's

HOOVER GUARD TIGHTENED

WASHINGTON, May 7.—(INS)—The Secret Service quietly increased its vigilance in guarding President Hoover today as a result of the assassination of President Paul Doumer, of France.

Extra operatives were not required, but there was a general tightening up of the routine around the White House. An even closer scrutiny of the many visitors to the executive offices was apparent, and all packages arriving in the mail room were closely checked.

Ever since the start of the depression and its subsequent wave of unemployment and public suffering, the detail charged with the safety of the President and his family has been extremely alert to see that no one under the delusion Mr. Hoover personally is responsible can get within reach of the executive.

First Lady, Friends Attending Wedding

NEW CANAAN, Conn., May 7.—(AP)—Mrs. Herbert Hoover came to New Canaan today to attend the wedding of Miss Marguerite Rickard, daughter of a college friend and former business associate of the President, and Grahan Hoyt, Yale art student. The wedding was scheduled for 12:30 P. M.

The First Lady and her part arrived here by automobile from Elmira, N. Y., at 1:40 a. m., and spent the rest of the night at the home of Miss Rickard's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Rickard. She planned to remain here about 12 hours before returning to Washington.

Ethel Clayton Must Take Divorce Decree

LOS ANGELES, May 7.—(AP)—Ethel Clayton, film actress, must accept the divorce decree awarded her from Ian Keith, actor, even though she may not want it.

Miss Clayton, who was awarded the decree some time ago, later decided she did not want it.

Tech Co-Ed, Professor's Daughter, Missing

Barbara Morehead, 20, a Carnegie Tech student and the daughter of a professor there, today was the object of a statewide police search.

She left her home early yesterday to attend classes, telling her mother that she would like to have her dinner early as she had a date for the movies in the early evening.

That was the last her parents heard from her.

At 1 a. m. today the Missing Persons Bureau was asked to start a search for her. The following description was broadcast over the state police ticker system:

"Five feet 8 inches; 120 pounds; tall and slim; brown eyes; dark hair; wearing a light blue beret, blue dress and tan and beige sport shoes."

Her father is James C. Morehead, a professor of architecture at Tech. The Moreheads live at 4815 Bayard street.

FANS AWAIT START OF DERBY

Tick On Favored to Win Famous Classic; Showers Forecast at Louisville

By FRANK G. MENKE
International News Service.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 7.—A few horses with a smattering of class, and the others merely selling platers, will run this afternoon in the fifty-eighth Kentucky Derby, richest prize in glory that the American turf can bestow.

Clear and warm weather prevailed early today for the running of the classic at Churchill Downs.

The temperature stood at 65 degrees and the sky was cloudless.

MULTITUDE OF TIPS

This gave fans hope that the Government Weather Bureau's forecast of probable showers would not eventuate, and that a fast track will favor the racing thoroughbreds.

Tick On remains the 9-to-5 favorite, probably because his trainer, Maxie Hirsch, is a better elocutionist, or perhaps because Tick On ran second to Top Flight in the Pimlico Futurity last year, the same Tick On that was whipped in his only outing this season and the same Top Flight that met the identical fate.

There are more tips in this race, more "sure thing" talk by owners and trainers of horses seemingly without a chance, than have been wafted over a Derby scene for almost a generation.

LOUISVILLE CALM

Trains, autos, boats, buses and planes came chugging into town all through the night and into the morning carrying their human freight consigned to Churchill Downs for an afternoon's holiday at Col. Matt Winn's track. But the unloading process left much to the desire of those who promote the annual classic and all indications were that the attendance might mark a new modern low for the event.

Louisville itself refused to become noticeably excited about it. These Kentuckians love horses, they know them and they demand that the Derby be a race embracing the greatest 3-year-olds in the land. Unfortunately, the best of the crop seem to be in their stalls this year suffering from illness or injury.

Fall in Room Fatal To Sister Alphonse

GEN. CROWDER DIES AT 73

WASHINGTON, May 7.—(AP)—Maj. Gen. Enoch Crowder, former ambassador to Cuba, died today at Walter Reed Hospital.

He was 73 years old. A few weeks ago he became seriously ill in Cuba and was brought back to this country for treatment. The cause of death was given as a general breakdown.

He was considered one of the outstanding legal experts of the Army and at one time served as judge advocate general.

Crowder originated the draft system under which 2,000,000 were drawn into the United States Army in the World War.

Graf Leaves Brazil After Fourth Visit

WINS RIGHT TO SHOW MOTIVE

Defense Gets Chance to Prove Lack of Evil Intent in Kline Actions

BULLETIN.

BUTLER, Pa., May 7.—B. L. Succop was recalled to the stand today after Judge Finletter's ruling permitting the defense to show evidence of lack of wrongful motive in city purchases without bids. Resolutions of Council approving such purchases were presented in evidence.

By M. V. BURGESS
Staff Correspondent.

BUTLER, Pa., May 7.—The defense in the trial of Mayor Charles H. Kline and Bertram L. Succop, scored an important, if not decisive victory today when Judge Thomas D. Finletter ruled that evidence was permissable tending to show absence of wilful or wrongful motive on the part of the defendants.

The trial late yesterday was held up while counsel began arguments, continued at the opening of court today on whether evidence as to circumstances surrounding purchase of certain supplies without bids should be admitted.

BACKBONE OF DEFENSE

The backbone of the defense has been that while the Mayor and Succop, former supplies director, charged with malfeasance, did not take bids on some supplies, Council subsequently approved the purchases by resolution and that no "corrupt" motive was involved.

Attorney W. D. Stewart, for the Citizens' Committee, contended that wilful meant intentional, and that even though a violation was made honestly that made no difference.

Judge Finletter said to Stewart:

"I agree with you that a resolution is not in the same class with an ordinance of Council. But willful must mean something more than intentional. It must mean something naughty, something bad, something wrong. Willful carries a sting in its tail and intentional doesn't."

PRICHARD ARGUES

For the defense, Attorney Charles B. Prichard argued that the prosecution must show existence of an "improper motive." He said:

"Wilfully depends on common sense and ordinary under-

Offer to Work Free Refused, Gigli Says

NEW YORK, May 7.—(INS.)—Benjamino Gigli, tenor, today explained he resigned from the Metropolitan Opera Company only after his offer to sing without compensation was rejected.

He said his lawyer advised him not to accept the reduction in salary most other artists agreed to take because his own contract was a long-term one, and would be voided by such action.

Gigli denied he criticised other singers from agreeing to the pay reduction.

Wealthy Horsewoman Shot By Japanese Butler

PRINCETON, N. J., May 7.—(AP)—Mrs. Donn Boice, owner of a string of show horses and former wife of Nelson B. Boice, was shot and seriously wounded by her Japanese butler today in her home on Cedar Grove road.

The butler, Isainu Yanashita, entered her room and shot the woman with an automatic pistol. One bullet struck her in the arm and another in the back. The butler ran as she fell.

Larry Daly, a groom, who had heard the shooting, met the butler in the living room and the Japanese fired a bullet that struck Daly in the cheek, inflicting a dangerous wound. The butler then fired a bullet into his own head and dropped dead a few feet from where Daly lay unconscious.

Mrs. Boice made her way to a telephone and called state police.

Mrs. Boice, reputedly wealthy, lives in comparative retirement in her bungalow near the Sourland Hills.

PRESIDENT, CABINET BLOCK ECONOMY, FOES CHARGE

WAR UNABATED AFTER HOOVER STATEMENT

Democrats' Resentment Unallayed by White House Strictures on Lobbyists

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service

WASHINGTON, May 7.—Literal warfare between President Hoover and Congress continued unabated today with Democrats answering the President's strictures by declaring that he and his cabinet are the chief obstacles of real economy.

The President's second pronouncement in two days on the necessity of a balanced budget and economy failed to allay the indignation of the Democrats although they detected a different note in the second statement.

While the President in his special message charged Congress with tactics which undermine confidence in his newspaper statement he stressed an attack on lobbyists who he said, mislead Congress as to the real attitude of the country.

NEUTRAL RULE DOOMED

The situation, it was generally admitted, dooms the possibility of a nonpartisan rule in the closing days of Congress.

Democrats in the House, who accepted Mr. Hoover's message as a direct slap at them, planned to continue their effort to present what they term the "true situation."

Speaker John N. Garner of the House, was urged by his colleagues to take the floor today to answer the President.

Members of Congress agreed with the President's statement that organized minorities which threaten members and the "locust swarm of lobbyists" make the path to economy difficult. They pointed to the parallel between these remarks of the President and those of Chairman McDuffie (Dem.), of Alabama, of the House Economy Committee, made a few days ago.

MORE MESSAGES HINTED

With intimations from the White House that the President plans more messages and statements in an effort to bend Congress to his will, Democratic members in self-defense turned upon the Chief Executive with a cry of "no quarter."

The accuracy of the President's claim that he submitted budget estimates $369,000,000 under appropriations made last year was questioned by Senator McKellar (Dem.), of Tennessee.

The President's budget recommendations, this session, including supplemental estimates, are actually $378,548,466 more than last year, McKellar said. The President, he said, omitted supplemental estimates in his comparison.

Employment of three secretaries by the President and the big White House garage cropped up in the congressional outbursts. Representative Fulbright (Dem.), of Missouri, said:

"The President urges everybody to buy a car and he bought 11 new ones for the White House with the people's money."

ANOTHER CHAIR TEST? -:- By Quin Hall

BONUS BACKERS STAGE FINAL STRUGGLE

Demands Force Committee To Debate Whether Action Shelving Measure Stands

WASHINGTON, May 7.—(AP.)—Because of desperate demands by sponsors of bonus-paying legislation, the Ways and Means Committee of the House met again today to consider whether its disapproval of the bills recorded yesterday should be allowed to stand.

Barring a summer session, the legislation has but the remotest chance of enactment in any case, but under the procedure approved yesterday by a 15 to 10 vote it would be killed off without a struggle.

Two conflicting sentiments were involved in today's review. The desire to keep for the House and its leaders credit for killing this $2,000,000,000 expenditure, and the question of fair play involved in using parliamentary tactics to defeat the will of many members.

As fixed up yesterday the Patman bill, principal bonus-paying plan, and all other similar measures would be returned to the House with an unfavorable report. To revive them a resolution would have to be introduced and taken up by the Rules Committee. It would be pigeonholed there and a discharge petition could not get it out before June 13. The Republican national convention meets in Chicago June 14 and Congress will not be sitting then, even though it may have to come back later.

A possible alternative was to hold the disapproved bills in committee, permit 145 members to file and sign a petition bringing one or all of them out in about two weeks for a vote. In this case many leaders believed it would pass the House and die on the Senate doorstep.

VOTE MACHINES INQUIRY SET FOR TUESDAY

Investigators and Firm Officials to Appear at Session in Harrisburg

The Senate Committee inquiring into the Allegheny County's $1,000,000 voting machine contract will convene at Harrisburg Tuesday morning. Nine persons, including officials of the Electromatic Vote Machine Corporation and the Allegheny County investigators have been served with subpenas.

The hearing, scheduled for Monday, was postponed because of the death of State Senator Augustus F. Daix, Jr., whose funeral will be held Monday in Philadelphia.

WRITS SERVED

State police served subpenas in Attorney Oliver K. Eaton's office yesterday afternoon on F. I. Hirsh, a brother of Attorney H. D. Hirsh, who is treasurer of the Electromatic Corporation; C. G. Brown, treasurer; Chet Cooke, president, and E. N. Rosenthal, an associate.

No subpena has been issued for bank records of Hirsh in the Potter Title and Trust Company as was reported yesterday.

Others served are Robert A. Gladstone, resident manager of the Poole Engineering and Machine Company; Louis Abramson, another officer of the Electromatic Corporation; Charles Pearson, sales agent for the voting machines in Northumberland and Schuylkill counties; Assistant County Solicitor Ralph H. Frank and M. C. Conick, chief auditor for Main & Co.

HIRSH TO PUSH SUIT

All of the subpenas were issued over the signature of State Senator Frank J. Harris, chairman of the Senate committee.

The statement of claim in a libel and slander suit filed against Frank yesterday by Hirsh will probably be filed today, Hirsh said. The suit is based on Frank's statement, in which he charged that papers and books of the Electromatic Corporation produced for examination were "prepared for the occasion."

HUNT $100,000

WASHINGTON, May 7.—(AP.)—A thoroughgoing hunt is on for the $100,000 Gaston B. Means is alleged to have obtained from Mrs. Edward B. McLean by false representations that it would ransom the kidnaped Lindbergh baby.

While Means remains in jail awaiting action of the grand jury which yesterday heard the extraordinary evidence against him, agents of the Department of Justice and Maryland police are busy searching possible hiding places.

Late yesterday armed with a search warrant, they ransacked his home in Chevy Chase, Md., just across the line from Washington. If they found any leads they kept silent but further search of the premises was in prospect.

KIDNAPERS FREE RICH YOUTH

JOLIET, Ill., May 7.—(INS.)—Released by kidnapers, who seized him as he was leaving his fiancee's house, Gustav Miller, 22-year-old son of a millionaire wholesale grocer, returned to his home here early today.

He was unharmed, but weary from his eight-day ordeal of captivity.

The youth's captors liberated him shortly before midnight in Deere Park, near Ottawa. His mother and brother, apparently following the kidnapers' instructions, were at the park to receive him and bring him home.

It was said that a ransom of $7,500 was paid, but Max Miller, the youth's father, refused to confirm this report. The kidnapers originally demanded $50,000.

AX CLUE IN FIRE AT SCHOOL

An ax, which had been used in an attempt to force entry into the Bell Avenue Public School Building, North Braddock, was being held today by Fire Marshal Thomas Pfarr as he investigated a mysterious fire which, late last night, caused $20,000 damage to the school building. Pfarr said the fire was incendiary.

While firemen fought the fire in a second-floor classroom, flames were discovered in the drawer of a desk in another room. Fire Chief Lewis Burdell, of North Braddock, said.

The fire was discovered by Mrs. Harriet Kekoe, of 913 Kirkpatrick street.

The Bell Avenue School has 18 rooms.

The flames burned their way through the classroom onto the roof.

Wilkinsburg House Set Afire by Iron

An overheated electric iron was blamed today by Fire Chief Samuel Jeffries, of Wilkinsburg, for a fire which did $2,000 damage to the home of Kenneth Slick, of 1421 Penn avenue, Wilkinsburg. Slick and his family left their home yesterday afternoon on a week-end trip. The iron burned through the ironing board, firing the floor. The fire was discovered by a passerby.

Train Reaches Town Snowbound 3 Months

SILVERTON, Col., May 7.—(AP.)—A three-month snow blockade was finally broken yesterday when a railroad train entered this little mountain mining town.

For two weeks in February Silverton was isolated by 30-foot drifts. Then food was brought in by pack mules and sleds. The Denver and Rio Grande Western branch line between Durango and Silverton later was cleared up to a point 16 miles from Silverton, but it was not until yesterday that the entire line was reopened.

Akron Due to Sail For West Tomorrow

LAKEHURST, N. J., May 7.—(AP.)—The naval airship Akron will leave tomorrow morning, if weather permits, for the West Coast to join the Pacific fleet in maneuvers.

Lieut. Commander Charles E. Rosendahl will command. He has indicated the ship will head for the Southwest and cross the Rockies west of El Paso, Tex. He will report the ship's progress daily to the Navy Department at Washington for the benefit of the press.

S. K. Rungee, of 225 Stratford avenue, driver of a Yellow cab, was robbed of $11 by two Negroes who held him up in Second avenue, below the Greenfield Avenue Bridge, he reported to police today.

SENATE ADOPTS HALE NAVY BILL

WASHINGTON, May 7.—(AP.)—By a wide margin, the Senate yesterday passed the Hale bill to authorize building the American fleet up to its limit strength.

Despite vociferous opposition which condemned both the military gesture and the expenditure eventually involved, the measure was approved 44 to 21. It makes no appropriation, but makes possible outlays up to a billion dollars for fighting ships. Its plan is not for immediate construction of every vessel required to reach the maximum allowances, but to provide for a gradual building program to replace obsolescent ships and increase strength over several years.

The House had an even more definite program in the Vinson bill, figured to cost about $600,000,000. It required a start on construction next year with an initial $18,000,000 appropriation. It was pigeonholed and, as a result, what reception the House will give the Hale bill remained to be cleared up.

FRANCE MOURNS DOUMER

condition, went to bed after midnight on receiving reports from Beaujon Hospital that the beloved statesman had a chance to live.

NATION SHOCKED

The nation, awakened by the brilliant sunshine of a mild spring morning, was shocked to learn M. Doumer had passed away.

His last hours were peaceful, according to Dr. Gosset," who revealed M. Doumer went into a coma at midnight.

Throughout the night a continual stream of government officials and close friends called at the hospital to learn of the President's progress.

Premier Andre Tardieu, leaving at 1:15 a. m., foresaw the end. He said:

"His condition is very critical. The end is nearing."

Later bulletins were issued by Dr. Gosset and five other attending physicians, confirming this and officially giving up hope.

At the President's death a previous censorship was lifted, and the news was flashed around the world.

Mme. Doumer and Mme. Emery, wife of the President's grandson, returned to the Elysee. Mme Doumer, who almost fainted when informed of her husband's death, was comforted by M. Tardieu.

The President's body was taken to the Elysee at 5:15 a. m., accompanied by the cabinet and the Garde Republicaine. The tri-color draped cortege moved slowly through streets, deserted except for a few workmen.

GUARD PLACED

A military guard was placed about the President's private apartments to watch over the body.

Dr. Paul Gorguloff, the assassin, was taken to Sante prison last night. Gorguloff was said by police to be insane. He claimed he headed a Fascist organization and shot the President to provoke a war against the Soviet republic.

Gorguloff was taken from his cell to the Palais de Justice this afternoon and formally charged with assassination of President Douber. When the routine proceedings were over, he was taken back to the Sante prison.

Meanwhile, France faced a political situation unprecedented in its history.

Technically, the country will be without a head until a national assembly is called at Versailles next week to elect a new president.

Favored to succeed M. Doumer was Albert Lebrun, president of the Senate. Lebrun and the council of ministers, meanwhile, are empowered to act as president.

NATRONA LIGHT RATES REDUCED

NATRONA, Pa., May 7.—The Natrona Light and Power Company, which serves 3,600 customers in Harrison Township at five cents an hour, today announced reduced electric rates would be put into effect July 1.

The present flat rate of five cents a kilowatt hour will be changed so that consumers whose bills exceed $5 a month will benefit.

Beginning July 1, and to encourage the sale of electrical appliances, the company's manager, G. Webber Knight, announced, the rates will be as follows:

For the first 100 kilowatt hours per month, five cents each; second 100 kwh., four cents each; all over 200 kwh., three cents a kilowatt hour.

These rates will not apply to industrial or street lighting, and are described as "promotional," for the stimulation of appliance sales.

The Natrona Light and Power Company, the Natrona Water Company and the Natrona Stores Company are all subsidiaries of the Pennsylvania Salt Manufacturing Company.

Vanished Public Defender Found in Sanitorium

SAN FRANCISCO, May 7.—(AP.)—Located after his whereabouts had been shrouded in mystery four days, Frank J. Egan, San Francisco public defender, was at a private sanitorium here today under police guard.

Captain of Inspectors Charles Duella explained Egan was not under arrest, the guard being for Egan's protection. After Capt. Duella received a broken-off telephone message, supposedly from Egan, Monday night, the public defender vanished. The officer said:

"When he gets well enough we will ask him the circumstances of his telephone call. Also, there is a homicide case in which the victim was known to him. We want to ask him if he now recalls anything further than he has already told us that may shed light on this case."

Prior to his disappearance Egan was reported to have told a deputy coroner he was the beneficiary of the will and insurance policies of Mrs. Jessie Hughes, a widow, whose body was found lying on a street here a week ago last night.

Vincent W. Hallinan, who said he was Egan's attorney, said he would advise the public defender to refuse to discuss his affairs with police.

Mrs. L. C. Broniscoe, owner of the sanatorium, said Egan was brought there by Hallinan early yesterday. She declared:

"Mr. Egan was in a terrible condition. He was unshaven, his clothing was rumpled and he appeared to be suffering from malnutrition and exposure. His mind also seemed to have been affected."

Police estimated the value of furnishings of the penthouse at $40,000.

standing of justice. There is case after case when wrongful intent was made the essence of the crime."

Judge Finletter's ruling:

"I rule tha tthe motive of the officer is involved and I will admit all circumstances surrounding the transaction."

JURY TAKEN OUT

Stewart contended that council had nothing to do with letting of a contract. He asserted, after reading the law governing city contracts, that all of its provisions had been violated in some point or other by testimony already brought out.

Stewart added:

"I think your honor will agree with me that if we agree on what the word wilful means, that the evidence may go before the jury. Plain neglect is an offense. The wilful doing of an unlawful act was the thing provided in the Ross case as shown by decision of Superior Court.

FINLETTER—Reading from Ross opinion:

"'The acts here forbidden are not necessarily unlawful'. Please explain that (to Stewart)."

Stewart—"What does wilfully mean. In criminal law it ordinarily requires a knowledge of the facts. Every intentional act is done wilfully."

Finletter—"Is there no difference between the two words?"

Stewart—"No. These defendants knew the law as they were bound to know the law and actually violated the law. There are two types of counts:

"1—Those in which there was utter failure to obey the statute.

"2—Those where purchases were approved by council."

Judge Finletter remarked that there were only four counts which appeared to come under the first classification:

1—The purchase of three trucks from Henry Braun without advertising for bids.

2—The lending of $6,700 to Braun in the shape of paying him for the trucks three weeks before they were delivered.

3—The purchase of thousands of dollars of goods from the Parke Company without advertising for bids. These orders were split up to be under $500.

4—The purchase of a Packard car by Walsh without inviting bds.

SEE ACTS USELESS

Resuming the argument, Stewart said:

"If a Mayor who has violated the law time after time can induce Council to approve his acts, then I say all the acts designed to protect taxpayers' money might just as well be repealed. I say violation of mandatory duty is enough."

Finletter:

"What if the violation is honest?"

Stewart:

"That does not make any difference."

As Stewart argued, Prichard moved alongside him, hand cupped to ear, which finally moved Stewart to remark impatiently to Prichard:

"Now if you'll only sit down."

Prichard ignored the suggestion.

Judge Finletter said:

"I agree with you that a resolution is not in the same class with an ordinance of council, but wilful must mean something more than intentional. It must mean something naughty, something bad, something wrong. Wilful carries a sting and intentional doesn't."

As court opened today President of Council John S. Herron, Public Safety Director James M. Clark, Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh and City Clerk Robert Clark were present, presumably waiting to be called as witnesses for the defense.

Just before Prichard closed his argumetn he argued his entire case and Stewart asked why he was doing it in the absence of the jury.

Prichard closed and Stewart again talked briefly. He declared the Supreme Court of the state had give ntwo opinions that the mere failure or neglect to perform public duties is enough.

Finletter—"You say that if a man did it honestly he is still offending against the law."

Stewart—"Yes."

Finletter—"I don't agree with you."

Judge Finletter then made his ruling.

MARCUS WAIVES HEARING

BUTLER, May 7.—Jacob Marcus, who was arrested on a perjury charge as he left the witness stand after testifying in the Kline-Succop trial Thursday, waived preliminary hearing for court last night at Alderman E. P. Peffer's office.

Attorney John Frankel came here from Pittsburgh to arrange a bond for the defendant. Marcus did not appear.

Marcus' arrest was ordered by District Attorney Park, of Allegheny County, after Marcus had allegedly changed his testimony from that given before the grand jury during the investigation of the Department of Supplies.

At the trial Marcus testified that after his food company had been refused recognition in the bidding for city contracts, he entered bids in the name of A. Nathanson, New Kensington grocer. Reading of his grand jury testimony in court revealed that he had said he entered bids in the name of A. Nathanson, a relative, of Anaheim street, Pittsburgh, now believed to be a fictious name.

NAVAL BOYCOTT THREAT STIRS HONOLULU

Civilian, Military Breach Widens; Mrs. Massie May Not Stay for Attack Trial

HONOLULU, May 7.—(AP.)—A breach between the United States Navy and civilian Honolulu widened today, with merchants apprehensive of a threatened boycott by the naval personnel.

The rift, first caused by the Massie assault case in September and the misstrial of the natives charged with the attack, spread steadily and had its latest impetus in the conviction a week ago of the four defendants in the Fortescue-Massie murder case. They were Mrs. Granville Fortescue, her son-in-law, Lieut. Thomas Massie; Albert O. Jones and E. J. Lord, naval enlisted men.

The four, who subsequently obtained a commutation of sentence, were convicted of the revenge slaying of Joseph Kahahawai, suspected as one attacker of Mrs. Thalia Massie, wife of the officer.

BOYCOTT MOVEMENT

While the boycott movement was still beneath the surface, it was understood certain personnel at Pearl Harbor Naval Station had written Pacific Coast firms, suggesting they open branch stores at Honolulu. It also was understood official circles at Pearl Harbor let it be known personnel making such requests could be disciplined by the Navy.

The whole city was watching, meanwhile, developments in the scheduled re-trial of four Hawaiians of mixed blood charged with assaulting Mrs. Massie. Retrial depends entirely on whether Mrs. Massie remains in the islands to testify.

John C. Kelley, public prosecutor, made public a statement calling on Mrs. Massie to remain as a witness. Mrs. Massie announced she planned to sail for the mainland aboard the S. S. Malolo, Sunday. Clarence Darrow, chief of the defense counsel for Mrs. Fortesue and her co-defendants, said Mrs. Massie had decided to remain.

MRS. MASSIE'S PROBLEM

Robert Bell, of New York, Mrs. Massie's uncle, said he "honestly didn't know" what she would do. It was learned on good authority that Mrs. Fortescue, to whom the prospect of her daughter "running away" from a re-trial was distasteful, insisted on her remaining. Darrow vigorously opposed it.

To try the case again, it has been pointed out, would mainly stir anew the feeling which has been less tense during the last few days than for months. They also believe the only other result would be another mis-trial.

With all this in mind, and also with an eye on official Washington, where acquittal or mis-trial of the four men might hoist even higher the specter of a commission government for Hawaii, these citizens are willing to consider the case closed.

DePriest Here Raps 'Honor Case' Furore

The American attitude in the Hawaiian "honor trial" was described by Oscar De Priest, Negro congressman of Chicago, as a "tacit indorsement of mob violence" in an address last night before the general conference of the African Methodist Episcopal Church at Wesley Center Church.

COAL BILL FIGHT HELD BLUNDER

Contending that the Davis-Kelly coal bill was designed to bring back prosperity to the coal industry, Patrick T. Fagan, president of District No. 5, United Mine Workers of America, said today the Chamber of Commerce has blundered in opposing the measure now before Congress.

The board of the chamber declared "absolute opposition" to the bill, declaring it would be ruinous to the coal business of Western Pennsylvania. Fagan said the statement was ridiculous since not a single coal corporation in the district can show any profit since 1927.

Fagan said:

"It is regrettable, but not surprising, to learn that the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce has blundered once more by its action on the Davis-Kelly coal bill.

"In 1925 the Chamber thought that the United Mine Workers of America was 'ruinous to the coal business of Western Pennsylvania.

"Now it seems the Chamber of Commerce is fearful that the Davis-Kelly bill may bring back the stabilizing influence of the miners' union and, as a consequense, put the coal industry on a profit-earning basis."

MOTHER WANTS FLIER'S BODY EXHUMED

Doctor Informed Her Marks On Son's Head Indicated Beating, Mrs. Clarke Says

By LARRY SMITS
International News Service.

MIAMI, Fla., May 7.—Mrs. Ida Clyde Clarke, mother of Haden Clarke, today announced she had asked State Attorney N. Vernon Hawthorne to exhume the slain writer's body, following information indicating he was beaten over the head before a bullet was put through his brain.

She also declared Capt. W. N. Lancaster, former British flier, held on a first degree murder warrant in connection with Clarke's death, had told her, three days after her son's death:

"Sometimes I think I did kill Haden."

Mrs. Clarke, a professor of journalism in the University of Miami, made these declarations today in her apartment in a Miami hotel.

TELLS OF INTERVIEW

She said Capt. Lancaster, released from questioning by state and Federal officers April 24 three days after Clarke died, came to her apartment with Mrs. Jessie M. Keith-Miller, Lancaster's associate in aviation and Clarke's fiancee. It was in the Keith-Miller home, where all three lived, that Clarke was shot, Mrs. Clarke said today.

"Capt. Lancaster said to me: 'Mrs. Clarke, I want you to say you know I did not kill your son.

"I told him: 'I hope I may be able to say that some day, Captain, but now I don't know whether you killed Haden or not. The circumstances are very strong.'"

QUOTES DOCTOR

Mrs. Clarke's wish that the body of her son be disinterred and an examination made, she said, was based on information she had received from Dr. Carleton Deederer, the physician who attended her son from the time he was found shot, at 3 a. m. April 21, in the Keith-Miller home, until he died, eight hours later. She declared:

"Dr. Deederer told me that in accordance with medical custom he shaved the wound in the right temple to diminish the danger of infection. In shaving the head, he disclosed three bumps behind the right ear that had nothing to do with the wound. In answer to a question, he said they might have been made with a pistol butt."

Slain Wife

MRS. EDNA YEDESKEY

Mrs. Yedeskey, 23, Uniontown, fatally shot by her suicide husband, Stephen Yedeskey, 28, climaxing a quarrel over his insistence upon a reconciliation. Her mother, Mrs. Lena Ache Johnson, 53, was also shot and seriously wounded.

A plan to inaugurate a police training school here, devised by Council and Public Safety Director James M. Clark, was commended today by the Civic Club of Allegheny County.

without training, that he must run 100 yards in 10 seconds flat. Advocates of the bill reply:

"You do not know how fast you can run, until the house is on fire."

EUROPE, FRIGHTENED by the bill, is "running away from the dollar," which means changing its American dollars into gold and taking the gold to Europe. The British, who do not want their pound to rise in price, are annoyed because selling the dollar to buy sterling makes the latter more valuable.

Finance, a puzzling thing, calls for another Maimonides to write another "guide to the perplexed."

IT IS CERTAIN that the country needs more money to promote buying and raise product prices. If twice as many dollars would make wheat worth $1 instead of 50 cents, and a day's work worth $6 instead of $3 or nothing at all, among six million unemployed, then one kind of common sense seems to say we ought to have twice as many dollars. It is easy to print them.

Wise finance asks:

"What is the use of twice as many dollars, if each is worth only half as much as the original dollar? And if, by inflation, you drive all the gold out of the country?"

A counter question is:

"Why do we LET our gold leave the country, and at present gold seems more important than the gas. We have more gold than any other nation. Why not keep it and tell the world: "You can't say we are off the gold basis, when we have the gold."

A Girl Does Not Dodge Work By Getting Married

Shall she rush to the altar with Quintyre, just because he'd make a good meal ticket? Or shall she wait and see if maybe Carl will "get serious" and pop the question?

Lee simply can't decide. She doesn't love Quintyre, even if he is a perfectly adorable fellow, and she thinks she does love Carl, but——

Well, here she is. Get an earful of her for yourself.

DEAR SALLY:

Will you please advise me? I can't make up my mind what it would be best for me to do.

About a year ago I met a lovely fellow, whom I shall call Quintyre. He lives in another part of the state and was here visiting with some friends when I met him. While he was here we went around together, and before he left to go home I got to thinking a lot of him, and I could see he was very fond of me, too.

He asked me to correspond with him, and I readily agreed to. We have been writing to each other all this time, and lately he has been begging me to marry him. But here's the hitch:

About three months ago I met Carl, and I'm simply "wild" about him. He seems to like me, and asks me out. We go around a lot together, but he never is serious. Perhaps he is right in not being, because he is not working steady now. He has practically nothing, while Quintyre could provide me with a lovely home, and could well take good care of me.

IS PUZZLED

Quintyre is a medical student, and will graduate at the end of next semester, when he will start practicing.

Shall I marry him, and be content to just like him, or, perhaps learn to love him later, or shall I sit tight, waiting for maybe "nothing at all" from Carl?

Please try to help me. I have thought and thought, and I can't seem to decide what I should do, so I am appealing to you. LEE.

What'll you do? Well, you'll have to decide that for yourself, lady. I can't pick your husband for you.

But I can tell you this much. You certainly have no right to marry one man when you think you're "wild" about another, especially when you're only considering marrying him because you think he'd be a good meal ticket.

INVITING TROUBLE

And I can tell you something else. If you try any such racket, you'll be picking yourself plenty of trouble; because, if you marry this man for his money, sooner or later he'll find you out for the cheat you are. And then, where'll you be?

As a matter of fact, why rush into marriage with anybody? Are you too lazy or too dumb to dig for your own cakes? If you are, you'd certainly be a bum bet as a wife for any man; for marriage, even when it is glorified by love, is no life of sweet idleness.

You may think you'll be dodging work and responsibility by saying "I do." You're mistaken. No matter whom you marry, be he rich or poor, you will be taking on a man-sized job, sister.

So I'd advise you to wait; to learn to be a regular gal, and not marry any man until you're sure you love him enough to give him a square deal.

'THE LITTLE SPRING HAT'

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

At first I was so preciously treated, and delicately handled. Jim pranced into the shop where I was created and set me upon her golden head. Once seeing me there, turning and twisting her pretty neck, eyeing me with bright speculation, cocking the gilded head this way and that like a lady robin, once through this unchanging feminine ceremony, she stood up and said, "I'll take it—it's a honey!" She paid for me out of a bag that smelled sweet, handling her new, crackling dollars gingerly so that she would not give two for one, and marched out into the Spring sun. And I rode along on top of one of the prettiest heads I saw!

She had tea in me, showing off my points with just the proper posing. Her eye was on the other girls in the pink and grey shop. Going out she screamed, we came so near side-swiping me against a newly painted, new-art door of a blue that hurt your eyes. She touched me tenderly with a tip of the finger of her French-gloved hand. "Golly, that was a near thing, my dearest possession!" says she.

Various delectable and gratifying incidents marked my day. I was flicked gently and delicately when she removed me, by white, pink-tipped fingers, and gloated upon by periwinkle-blue eyes. When it started, just STARTED to rain, with scattered, huge plops of crystal that glinted in the sun, she ran frantically, with her hand spread out above me, her eye on the heavens, her breath coming fast.

All this! And then—along came a young man out of a station gateway! He approached like a shell from a cannon. Even forgot to take off his hat. He dropped his grips with abandon, and grasped my gilded head Jill to his bosom. She gurgled faintly, flung herself in his embrace. And I—I fell off!

And no one picked me up for quite some time. And when they did, I was clapped on any old way, and walked off with indifferently, except that the Young man casually said, "That's a cute lid you're wearing, lam-pie!" NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

By Mrs Cornelius Beekman

Wedding Invitations

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

In sending out invitations for a wedding is it correct to send separate invitations to each member of a family who is of a marriageable age or to send one invitation to the entire family?

T. W.

It is far better—far better—form to send separate invitations to every member of the family who is of an age appropriate to receive such formal invitations. I have never thought of expressing it as a matter of age, but perhaps that might be right. This indicates, of course, naturally brings with it an indication of a more personal compliment than the blanket invitation to the entire family. The family invitation should never be sent unless it is really necessary. And the expression "and family" should not be used, even when a family invitation is sent. The names should be written out rather than the and family expression used:

Mr. and Mrs. Willis Hope
The Misses Hope
Mr. John Hope
780 Remington Street
Utica, New York

General Hints

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

1. When two women and one man are walking on a street, on which side is the man supposed to be?

2. When two women and a man are at the theater, how is the man to sit? If one seat happens to be near an isle, who is to sit there?

3. When two women and a man are on the street car, what is the correct way to be seated?

FREDERICK.

The man should walk on the side of the pavement nearest the curb. He should not "sandwich" himself between them.

2. The man sits in the seat nearest the aisle.

3. The man will find it easier to talk with both women if he does not sit between them, that is, it is very difficult to keep up a three-cornered conversation when the person in the center is supposed to talk with people each side of him. If the man does not sit between them, he can lean over and converse much more easily. Otherwise one woman is left out of the conversation, at least at times.

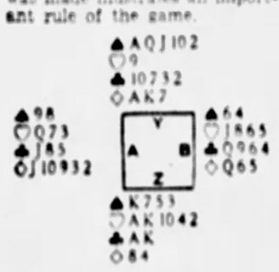
Contract Bridge -:-

OFFICIAL SYSTEM As Adopted by Leading Authorities

By E. V. SHEPARD

Picking Up That Extra Trick

Although not really in fashion, tens of thousands of bidders employ feature showing when mated with a player favoring that lucid method of disclosing precise side tricks. Happening to be paired with an inveterate feature shower I held Y's hand. The way contracting went is interesting, and the manner in which a grand slam was made illustrates an important rule of the game.



Z made an opening bid of 1-Heart. Opponents made no bids. I shifted into 2-Spades. Z responded with 3-Spades. Y's response of 4-Diamonds showed the lowest ace held, and requested partner to show the lowest ace that he had. If Z had lacked the Ace of clubs, and had bid 4-Hearts, I would have ended bidding with 4-Spades, considering that the safe limit. But Z bid 5-Clubs, as the lower of two aces must first be shown by the partner of the one giving the slam signal. I showed my K of diamonds, by bidding 5-Diamonds. Aces being shown before kings, caused Z to bid 5-Hearts. From my side of the table there could not be told whether or not even a small slam could be negotiated with safety. I did not know that my partner held any one of the following cards: four trumps headed by the K, the K of hearts, or the K of clubs; we had not sufficient bids in which to show all these things; bidding had advanced too rapidly to disclose all features held. I had to show lack of added features, by bidding 5-Spades.

On his side of the table Z saw the four important features that were hidden from me. He knew that no tricks could be lost in either clubs or diamonds. He saw the kings of both hearts and trumps. He calculated that I must hold not less than six spades to the Ace, or five spades with A-Q-J, to dream of making even a small slam. We held in certain tricks, five spades and two hearts. We were certain of four minor suit tricks; this made 11 positively safe tricks. Z could trump two leads of minor suit cards, which would make 13 tricks. The only possible fly in the ointment was that I might hold three small hearts, causing us to lose one trick there. Being as I knew, a very careful bidder, Z raised the declaration to only what he could see on a spread of the two hands; Z bid 6-Spades. If my partner could bid 6-Spades, without knowing that I had a singleton heart, I would not be exceeding the speed limit if I bid 7-Spades, and I did so.

The opening lead was the 4 of clubs, and dummy ran off two tricks in that suit. One of the first things taught a player is to get out his trumps. The second thing that should be taught is not to pull trumps before ruffing off losers. The hand in play required dummy to trump one diamond and one club for me. I could not discard one losing club upon one of dummy's two good hearts. As I needed to preserve only two of dummy's trumps for ruffing off my losers, I could take two rounds of trumps, hoping to drop the four outstanding trumps in two leads. As expected, two rounds of trumps picked up all opponent's spades, enabling me to spread my hand for the grand slam. It is useless to play a hand that contains no losing tricks.

How to Keep Well

'Ptomain Poisoning' Is a Term You Shouldn't Use

When foods decompose and decay, certain chemical reactions take place and poisonous substances develop. These chemical combinations often cause much distress if taken into the body. The substances formed by putrefaction are called "ptomains."

Dr. Copeland

The early conception of ptomain poisoning assumed that ptomains were poisonous substances developed by germs or bacteria. It has been proved that bacteria do not liberate such poisons. Ptomains differ in this respect from "toxins"—poisons which are products of bacteria and which are highly detrimental to the body.

Ptomains are merely decomposition products, and as a rule they are easily handled by the body. They are often harmless and cause little, if any, distress. The ill effects caused by ptomains are usually of short duration. Ptomains and toxins are a menace if continuously liberated and produce inflammations of the mucous membranes of the body.

Ptomain poisoning is a term that was in frequent use some years ago. It was applied to the suffering from any severe gastro-intestinal upset, and the symptoms were laid to food poisoning. For many years the term was loosely used by both the medical profession and the lay public.

In these days we hear little of "ptomain poisoning," and the expression is disappearing from scientific literature. One well versed in the study of toxins and poisons rarely refers to ptomain poisoning. In the light of present knowledge the term should not be used.

Protein decomposition resulting in the formation of ptomains is now quite rare. It may occur by neglect in hygiene and care of the health. I always advise the drinking of six to eight glasses of water each day. When you drink water you dilute and eliminate, through your skin and kidneys, whatever poisons accumulate in your body.

Tub baths are beneficial because they cleanse the skin and wash away the poisons excreted through the pores. Constant care to avoid constipation is important, for it does away with the danger of absorption of ptomains and other detrimental food substances.

We know about foods and how to care for them. Modern methods of refrigeration have helped a lot. Rapid transportation facilities and expansion of the canning industry have done away with many of the dangers of decayed and spoiled foods. The laws have given protection to the consumer, and perhaps no greater progress has been made anywhere than in the preservation of foods.

Keep Unity in the Family

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

I usually feel very sorry for the father of a new baby. Even though he beams with pride over the small, squirming thing in the tiny bed, it seems to me there's always a wistful look back in his eyes—a longing for the pal he usually loses when baby arrives.

There's an excuse. Bless your heart, don't I know it? Doesn't every mother know how the minutes fly when a day is marked off by baths, feedings, washings of small garments, meals to plan, ironings to be sandwiched in somehow, doorbells to answer, bottles to be sterilized, and so on indefinitely, so that when her erstwhile playmate comes home she is too utterly tired to be very much aware of him.

And, apart from the fatigue that often accompanies a woman's child-care, in many cases there is a distinct transfer of affection from the big boy to the little fellow, and the big boy knows it.

On the other hand, particularly when affairs haven't been as harmonious as they might, the father often stops all advances toward the girl who was his sweetheart and lavishes his affection on the baby.

It is a sad situation, but easy to slip into, and should be studiously avoided by keeping in mind the fact that each member of a family must help round out the family unity which is so essential as the atmosphere for a growing child.

Don't forget that you have a husband just because you adore the new infant. And husbands, don't forget that a good deal of patience is required of you during this period, to keep from losing the sweet companionship of the girl you married. In your enthusiasm over the new son or daughter, don't forget each other! There is love enough to go round. There need never be a transfer of love to a baby, for he brings his own right along with him.

Keep aware of each other through the first few months of your new baby's life, and the later sailing will be much smoother, and much more joyous for both you and that baby.

Household Hints

Dampened ashes will clean steel knives beautifully.

Cold tea or milk will make plants blossom. Alternate with water every other day.

If cold baked potatoes are dipped for a minute in hot water, and placed in a warm oven until they are warm, they will be as nice as if freshly baked.

Stained white porcelain sinks regain their snowiness if they are dampened and sprinkled with chloride of lime. The lime should be allowed to remain for 30 minutes.

To sweep a carpet thoroughly without raising dust, place a newspaper in a basin of water, remove and tear into small pieces. Sprinkle these over the carpet and sweep them up—they will collect all the fluff and dust.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Fail not to massage the tissues directly in front of the ears. They are soft, thin and delicate and have an unpleasant way of inviting small wrinkles to take up lodging.

In the beauteries that make a specialty of treating scalps, the girls with hair that always looks as if it has been freshly buttered are getting all steamed up. It is as if the professor of pulchritude said to the sweat and oil glands of the scalp: "Go ahead, do your durndest." The scalp is deluged with hot oil, the dear one's head is popped under a steamer and in half an hour is shampooed. Then comes the ice rub. It's the ice that downs the oil gushers. It works best when the head has been pretty well boiled. From one extreme to the other, you see. The scalp doesn't know what to make of it, and reforms.

Once a day isn't sufficient for the thorough washing of the face with soap and warm water. The scrubbing should be at night; it should not be casually accomplished. What with soot falling like rain in large cities, faces take on grime that a delicate lady-like face washing does not thoroughly remove. In the morning use cold water. When cleansing up during the day use a liquid cosmetic or a thin cold cream.

Because Missus Fashion has tightened up the belt, put the waist line where it belongs, is no reason why the plump darling must follow 'long. A lower girdle reveals less bulk, gives the figure a better outline. Let the weight-crusher keep in mind that bouffant fabrics cause her to look larger; her best bets are georgettes, chiffons and thin satins that cling close. Dark colors slenderize, light ones add to dimensions.

It will break Morrie Ryskind's heart. And it's one of those fine, sensitive hearts you find only in story books. I mean that proposed plagiarism suit against him, George S. Kaufman and Ira and George Gershwin, the Pulitzer Prize Play contrivers, and the producers of "Of Thee I Sing." The very suggestion of doubt of their originality is a bit incongruous. There should be a law against putting fellows like Morrie on the spot. I remember 16 years back when we worked side by side in Wm. Fox's press department. We felt a little shamed then of our work. We were doing the cackling while the mill-ion dollar eggs were being laid by Bill Farnum, Theda Bara, Tom Mix and the rest of Mr. Fox's puppets. We were both too young to know anything about compromise. Or about the necessity of starting at the bottom. I had just arrived on Ballyhoo Blvd. and Morrie was just out of Columbia. Out is the word. As editor of the Spectator, he opposed war. And said so one day in bold Front Page type. Those were dangerous days to oppose preparedness. The 72-point headline vibrated in the hands of Nicholas M. Butler, and Morrie vibrated out of college.

Morrie didn't care about the degree, but he did care about finishing something he had started. He made good as a press agent, but he never made too good at it. He wasn't exactly happy singing the other mans praises when he felt the creative urge being stifled within himself. He found it difficult to write flamboyant eulogies of half-wit screenie celebrities. But when Ben Schulberg hired him to give Clara Bow the build-up, he accepted the job out of necessity. Clara was a little Brooklyn lass with the average intelligence of the flapper of the day. Sudden contracts had overwhelmed her and she wasn't quite sure of her step. Morrie took me along the day he introduced her to Louella Parsons for her first interview. Clara suggested the Ritz for lunch but Morrie led the way to a chow meinery. The less pretentious setting was best for the little girl who was destined to become the nation's "It." Clara became famous as a result of her earliest Chinese luncheon-meetings with the movie writers. The informality won sympathy. It was Morrie's contriving. But every time he did a great publicity job he felt unhappier. "I've got to get somewhere myself," he'd say.

Well, Morrie finally did get somewhere. He wrote songs and plays. And each was better than the last. They called him in to doctor feeble shows and each time he refused to have his name placed with the authors. I only revised it. I didn't write it." was the alibi of the present Pulitzer Prize winner. Then there was the time that Frank Case, prop. of the Algonquin Hotel where the famous Round Table met each noon, objected to some of Morrie's table companions. There was no compromise for that situation! And Morrie walked out. And took a lot of sentiment with him. The fact that Case had not expressed himself clearly and that he regretted his impulsiveness with a public apology meant nothing to Morrie. There was no compromise here despite the fact that giving up the Algonquin conferences put him back a few years. To this day Morrie has not stepped in its doors. Recently when he was called to inject himself into the manuscript of "Blessed Event," he worked for six weeks. But Morrie's name does not appear as co-author. He didn't want it, and even if none of his material remains in the present script, there is no question about the influence he exerted on its final form. Somehow, it is impossible to link such a man with plagiarism. Or even to stamp him and his collaborators as idea-thieves.

It's very funny about "Blessed Event." Manny Seff and Forrest Wilson are the authors. And the theme is an expose of how a gossiping columnist operates. The hero is a blow-getting news-gatherer who startles the breakfasters each morning with fresh items hot off Broadway's boudoir. He scurries, scoots and edges into, out of and around every corner of the town's by-ways. . . . He knows all, sees all and tells all. Last night I stopped into Mr. Seff's apartment for 20 minutes of backgambling. It was 3 in the dawning when I finally became resigned to my losses. . . . And excused myself because I had to fare forth in search of torrid news. But the Man Who Knows Columnists and takes royalties from the plays he writes about them was puzzled. "At this hour," he asked quizzically, "where will you go to get material?"

You can't exactly blame Wm. Fox. They tell me he and his wife cried in Palm Springs the other evening when they were shown the talky version of "Over the Hill." The original film was the ex-producer's own idea. And he lost many nights' sleep plotting its details. When it finally was completed and shown to the assembled sales mgrs., even the most talented yes-men among them advised its scrapping. "It'll only hurt the rest of our product." . . . But Fox was adamant and the film was released. It netted $2,000,000 in profits the first yr. And is still being circulated in isolated houses in the Far East. This money became the real basis for the present Fox Film Corp. And for the producer's own wealth. Somehow the addition of voice and the re-taking of all the scenes is blasphemy to a sentimentalist. And I don't blame him. That papier mache dummy that writes ad legends on a blackboard in the doughnut shop on 45th St. and Broadway has puzzled the curious for over a week. But Bill Vallee, Rudy's brother, wouldn't leave the spot until he had figured it out. So he went inside, ordered 12 portions of pastry and milk, and finally slid under the railing next to the contraption. And Bill discovered it was all a fake. . . . A man was operating the dummy's hand via telautograph. . . . I'm glad that's settled, it had me losing sleep.

That's irony with a capital I. . . . I mean the story about the Westchester couple who were interrupted during their asphyxiation-pact by a knock at the door. It was the gas bill collector. He promptly gave up the situation and had the pair arrested. But the charge was not attempted suicide. . . . They were held for wilful intent to defraud the company by escaping a long overdue bill.

Jackie Cooper Real Star As Limpy

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Not being a sentimental female I may be permitted to indulge in a few rhapsodies over Jackie Cooper, even on the eve of Mothers' Day. That little lad who won his place in the sun and the hearts of picture patrons with "Skippy" and "The Champ" is back on the screen at the Penn Theater and is the real star of "When a Feller Needs a Friend," a picture based on William Johnston's "Limpy." Jackie Cooper with his eloquent lower lip and his adorable blubber is worth a dozen Clark Gables. He can act all around most of the big he-men who are the idols of the sororities.

Mr. Seibel

Opposite him is a real comedian—the delectable Chic Sale, who enacts the old Uncle with the imagination of a Munchausen but some good ideas on bringing up little boys. Uncle Chic Sale driving a horse car, shooting a pistol at a tin can, or getting ready to go to the poorhouse is a fine foil to the pathetic and heroic Jackie.

This is a very fine picture—no vulgarity, no cheap padding, rich humor and the golden heartbeat of childhood—splendid acting and fine photography.

The stage show is "Girl Crazy," a Gershwin musical comedy cut to tabloid proportions. It's about a Broadway playboy sent West by his father to cure him of his heart troubles. As soon as he appears in Custer County, Arizona, "that place is overrun by girls just like Broadway." There are some catchy tunes, some more or less amusing comedy, some pips, dancing and all the other things that go into a girly-whirly show. It cannot be denied that it is a real bargain if the word "bargain" can be used of art, or if the word "art" can be used of musical comedy.

Lois Miller is given the grateful task of playing and singing some of Bizet's "Carmen" music with orchestral accompaniment which is a welcome relief from current stupid songs.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., May 7.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Our heretofore docile Quaker President went on the war path Thursday and cut loose with both barrels at Congress, and his message was loaded with votes.

Will Rogers

It was on government economy. He told the country in his own way what was happening. "You guys are not going to do anything about cutting down. You are afraid because every one you fire has got a vote, so if you are afraid to shoot the bear, give me the gun and I will do it, and take the consequences." Somebody has been feeding Herbert raw meat, and if he keeps up that diet, and builds up those corpuscles, he will be elected by acclamation.

Yours, WILL.

BITS OF LIFE
All in a Day
By Mark Hellinger

The Cycle

THE HIGH SCHOOL boy was trying very hard to sound natural. He was doing well enough when he kept his eyes on his pencil and his paper, but when he looked into the eyes of that beautiful star of the stage he found it very difficult to speak without stammering.

There was little reason for it. He, Homer Smith, had requested an interview for his high school paper. She, Marilyn Queen, had been most gracious about it. If Mr. Smith would come backstage during the intermission at the Thursday matinee, Miss Queen would be only too happy to grant him a few moments.

So there sat the boy. His face was flushed and his hands were warm. Secretly, he was a trifle annoyed with himself. True, it was the first time he had ever been backstage in a great Broadway theater, and surely anyone would be flustered in the presence of the most beautiful and famous musical star of the day. But Homer Smith felt certain he should be acting more the man of the world. Hadn't he reached 17 two weeks before? Certainly he had. Why this was nonsense.

He coughed.

Miss Queen, he said, I have a few questions here that I would like to ask you. The first one is—

He looked up into those beautiful eyes. He stopped talking. He swallowed hard. Then he shrugged his shoulders helplessly.

I, I guess I'm just a kid, he stammered boyishly, and I'm afraid we'll have to let the interview go. When I see how beautiful you are, I—I can't remember the questions.

The charming one threw back her head and laughed happily. Why, this boy was sweet—and human. A grand child, really. She leaned forward and placed a hand over his. His eyes almost popped from his head. She smiled softly.

You couldn't have said a sweeter thing, she told him. I hear many things, but only one in a thousand is honest. Come in, Mr. Smith, you mustn't be afraid of me. Just ask me what you wish and I'll help you as much as possible.

Did you hear that? She had remembered his name—and tacked a Mr. on to her. Gee, wasn't she grand? The boy's eyes sparkled. His fear left him. He began to talk. Rapidly and naturally.

She could give him but 10 minutes—but they were 10 minutes the boy would never forget as long as he lived. Too bad they had to fly so swiftly. It seemed but a matter of seconds when she was bidding him goodby.

Goodby, Miss Queen. You've certainly been wonderful to me. I'm gonna write a swell article about you and I'm gonna send you a copy of it, too. Goodby, Miss Queen. You're—you're—you've certainly been wonderful.

Outside the stage door Homer Smith stood for a moment against the wall and gazed up at the sky.

"Gee," muttered the boy to himself. What a grand person she is! She has fame and fortune and everything. I'd give anything to be able to change places with her.

* * *

Shortly before the finale of the matinee performance Marilyn Queen picked up the telephone in her dressing room. She hesitated. She put it down again. Then she snatched it swiftly and called a number. A male voice answered.

Will Mr. Gerald Malcolm speak to me, please? she asked. This is Marilyn Queen.

Gerald Malcolm! The power behind the city of New York. A multi-millionaire who guided the destinies of banks and trusts and politicians. A mysterious man who moved in mysterious ways. A man who moved mayors and a figure who governed governors. A fictional character who actually existed. Gerald Malcolm.

Mr. Malcolm will speak to you in a few seconds, Miss Queen, said the voice. Hold on, please.

The woman's heart thumped wildly. She was going to hear his voice again. His voice! It would be the first time she had been able to reach him in three days. She—

Hello, Marilyn, said another voice. How are you my dear?

Gerald's voice! And it sounded tired to her. She held the phone close to her lips.

Dear man, she breathed. I feel splendidly. But you—you sound tired. Are you all right?

Well enough, I imagine, he replied. But I've been working very hard. Too hard, I guess. But it can't be helped.

The beautiful one fumbled nervously with her powder box.

I want to see you, she said. Oh, so very much. The matinee is almost over. Can I—can I come over and talk to you?

There was no hesitation on the part of the man.

No, Marilyn. Not today. I'm going out for a short drive and then I'm going to bed. Perhaps we'll see each other a little later in the week. When I'm not so tired. I mean. I like you very much and I'd rather be with you than anyone I know. But for the time being—goodbye, my dear.

Goodbye, my dearest, murmured the star.

She replaced the receiver slowly. And she turned to her maid.

What a marvelous man! she whispered dreamily. He holds the world in his palm. What I'd give to be like him!

* * *

A large Rolls-Royce stood in front of the Gerald Malcolm mansion on Fifth avenue. The door of the house opened, and a chauffeur and footman sprang to attention. Out came the man the man of power and millions. He was not yet 50 years of age. Yet his hair was very white, his eyes were very tired, and he leaned heavily on the arm of a male companion.

They helped him into the limousine and placed a robe around him and his companion. The footman stood at attention.

Just a short drive, said Malcolm. Go through the upper part of the city. Have me back in an hour.

The footman took his place beside the driver. The car drove off.

It was fully 20 minutes before the millionaire spoke to his companion.

George, he said finally, something tells me that I'm a pretty tired man. I haven't very much to look forward to, have I?

His companion laughed.

You're talking nonsense, Malcolm, he returned. Why, you're in the very prime of life. You have everything worthwhile in life. What is there that you can possibly ask?

A traffic light stopped the Rolls Royce. It stopped it in the middle of Central Park. Off to the left, a group of high school boys were playing baseball. And at the bat was Homer Smith, his interview with Marilyn Queen far from his mind in the thrill of the moment.

The boy gripped his bat tightly. On his cheeks was the color of health, in his eyes the glow of youth. His shoulders were square and his legs were strong.

Gerald Malcolm looked out at Homer Smith. His eyes grew soft.

There is youth, he sighed. If I could only change places with a boy like that!

ALIQUIPPA, Pa., May 7.—Reappointment of Wilfred R. Troxel as postmaster of Aliquippa has been recommended by Congressman J. Howard Swick.

Akron's Value Shown on Screen

THE GLOBE TROTTER

The amazing value of the giant dirigible Akron in times of war or in times of peace, is aptly demonstrated by pictures in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News showing airplanes hooking onto and being released from the mighty airships while in full flight.

The trials were made over New Jersey with the Akron 3,000 feet in the skies. Wierdly the airplanes are detached from the world's biggest airship and fly away to return later and skim under the giant body of the Akron. Like an old mother hen she gathers them to her and stores them away under her "feathers." Views taken from accompanying aircraft plainly show how the hooking apparatus works. Hearst Metrotone News is shown in the Penn, Fulton and other theaters, with a graphic description by the Globe Trotter.

SHOW CAPONE

Al Capone, "public enemy No. 1," is pictured on his way to the Federal Penitentiary in Atlanta, Ga. He is shown arriving at the Dearborn Station in Chicago shackled to another prisoner. A great crowd jeers and cheers as he starts on his way to begin his 11-year term of imprisonment.

Weird and picturesque scenes are presented of the reception tendered King Albert of Belgium by the semi-savage hordes in the heart of Uganda, South Africa. Thousands of his half-naked subjects in the Congo colony beat tom-toms and engage in blood-curdling cries and fantastic dances for the entertainment of their distinguished visitors. Even a great herd of hippopotami disport in the Congo River for the King's entertainment. These remarkable pictures show the giant beasts plunging back and forth in their play and indulging in an occasional fight.

King George of Great Britain and Queen Mary are shown as they attend the great football cup final at Wembley. A crowd of 100,000 persons is present and in addition to pictures of the football game between Newcastle and Arsenal, there are unusual close-ups of the British rulers. At the conclusion of the game the Queen presents a cup to the victorious Newcastle team.

FAMOUS TRIO

A rare and historical picture shows Prime Minister MacDonald, of Great Britain; Chancellor Bruenning, of Germany, and Premier Tardieu, of France, posing in a triple handclasp at the disarmament conference at Geneva. Following this unusual scene, Premier MacDonald is seen and heard speaking on the progress of the conference.

Diving stars of the United States engage in amazing tests for the Olympic swimming contests in the new pool at Los Angeles. The pictures show every imaginable kind of dive and end in a group dive in which nine girls and men plunge from the high boards simultaneously.

May Day is celebrated at Wellesley College, Massachusetts, with the annual hoop race. Mildred Marcy wins and receives congratulations from the president of the class, Elizabeth Kaiser, as all the girls group themselves to form the figures 1932 and sing their college song.

In the Dark

Cortez, Dunne In Davis

"Symphony Of Six Million," picture version of Fannie Hurst's tale, moved to the Davis screen yesterday to continue a run that began in the Warner a week ago. It is a story of ambition that takes a humble Jewish family from the Ghetto to the fashionable district. The move is made possible because a son of the family casts aside his ideas of duty when he becomes a skilled surgeon. He thinks he should serve the poor. His parents needs comforts. He yields, but eventually returns to the clinic he deserted.

Ricardo Cortez and Irene Dunne are featured and they give the roles assigned them a touch of naturalness that is most convincing. There is realism, comedy and pathos in the picture, which is well-acted throughout.

Stanley Film, Stage Show Are Hits

By EDWARD W. GOSS

"So Big," Edna Ferber's story on the Stanley screen, gives the customers more than their cost of admission would indicate.

Barbara Stanwyck, in the lead, Bette Davis, Dickie Moore and the other cast members do everything possible to make for the success of the film.

The story centers about a woman who is given more than her share of the world's dirty digs. Briefly, she is the daughter of a gentleman gambler. Her gaming father is killed, she takes a job as a country school teacher, marries a farmer, the farmer dies, she operates the farm and raises a son.

This woman of the soil, played by Barbara Stanwyck, is the personification of American womanhood as we would like it to be.

Packed with heart-throbs, "So Big" would have been easily overplayed if the company had been a least bit careless and, consequently, would have been reduced to a very damp piece of mawkish sentimentality. But the company was careful so all is as it should be.

One of the best points of the film is its ending—no wise crack intended. Love, kisses and flowers are absent at the fadeout. The close is devoted to realization of a hard-working woman's dreams.

If "So Big" causes lumps to rise in any throats, and it should, they are dispelled by the stage show, "Stage Door," featuring Bob Hall, the man who makes up songs as he sings them. Yesterday Bob sang songs of beer, pretzels and cheese, popular themes apparently. The stage show is rounded out by achorus in several novel dances and "The So-and-So" trio, made up of P. C. W. girls selected by Paul Whiteman last week as the best amateur talent competing in a Pittsburgh contest.

As usual Bernie Armstrong is at the organ. Bernie devotes himself to Mother Day selections. He, too, does his part of the job well.

Punch Movie In Warner

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

For some time the underworld has been on top of the world as far as the screen is concerned and a number of stirring, if not exactly edifying, pictures have been the result. Count among the foremost of them "The Mouthpiece," showing in the Warner a picture of crookdom from a different angle than any heretofore presented, and one that reveals a big punch in every separate scene. "Mouthpiece" in the language of the thief and gangster, is a lawyer.

In "The Mouthpiece" Warren William, as an assistant district attorney, is shocked by the fact that he has sent an innocent man to his doom, and makes a vow that his talent will be given to free anybody and everybody from the toils of the law. The crooks flock to him and he waxes rich through resorting to tricks that are spectacular and daring. Then another change of heart comes and he actually puts himself "on the spot" to clear an innocent youth by sending the real crook for whom he should be "the mouthpiece" to jail.

That is the bare outline. It is a rapid-fire picture and a fascinating one. It is not a string of murders but a visualization of the shrewd mentality of a good man who goes wrong and then right. William makes you admire his nerve and inventiveness, at least, even as a blackleg. Aline MacMahon, former McKeesport girl, does grand work as his secretary. Sidney Fox, as the stenographer in whom he is interested, is abundantly pleasing.

NEW HATS FEATURE DOTTED ORGANDIE

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, May 7.—You'll be seeing dots before your eyes when you wear one of the new wide brimmed hats made of dotted material. These hats, charming, youthful and gay, are being made in dotted organdie and linen. And they are grand to wear as a concession to the monotoned frock. No doubt some women with a passion for matching the various items of their costume will wear these dotted hats with dotted prints. But they will find that the combination will not be a very successful one.

It is always better to use too little of anything than too much. This goes for sartorial effects just as it does for everything else in life. There are certain cardinal rules that always obtain regardless of the fashion or the season. But to return to our very nice hats. It is interesting to note that although this is a straw year many designers are showing fabric hats with much success.

* * *

SKETCHED TODAY is a trio of fabric hats including the new dotted organdie models. These have been introduced by Chanel for wear with her one toned summer frocks. They are wide-brimmed, shallow crowned affairs worn very much atilt. Masses of field flowers are pressed closely against the hair at the high side. These are balanced by smaller sprays placed at the base of the crown at the opposite side. The lower sketch shows another fabric model this time by Agnes. The odd, acorn shape of the crown is obtained by drawing a wide band of the material into pleats at the top of the head. Through the pleats is threaded a narrow ribbon of navy blue grosgrain which ties in a bow at the side. The material is bright red crepe-ribouldingue, a heavy crepe with a fancy weave.

'Headline Hunter' Discusses Hawaii on WCAE Tonight; Derby Thrills Broadcast

Saturday, May 7

"Hello, everybody!"

When that familiar greeting comes across a nation-wide network of the National Broadcasting Company, including WCAE, tonight at 11:15 o'clock the entire radio audience of the country is expected to be tuned in to hear Floyd Gibbons discuss the present day situation in Hawaii.

The broadcast marks the return to the NBC network of the famous "headline hunter" . . . just returned from covering the Sino-Japanese conflict around Shanghai.

On the way home he stopped off in Honolulu to look into the racial conflict as a result of the Massie . . . case, during which he talked with leaders of the different groups there and formed his own opinions of the political situation after studying the first-hand information he received. Since that time he has conferred with Congressional leaders in Washington on the question of whether Hawaii should be left under control of the Navy Department.

His talk . . . "Hawaii, Pearl of Polynesia."

Thrills of the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs are brought to Pittsburgh listeners tonight with broadcasts heard through WJAS beginning at 6:30 and through WCAE beginning at 6:45. On the rival networks Graham McNamee and Ted Husing vie for honors in giving word-pictures of the colorful crowd and of happenings before and after the classic. The description of the actual running of the race is given by Clem McCarthy, NBC's racing expert, and by Thomas B. George, the turf authority for CBS.

Louis Sobol's . . . settles down in Louisville for the festivities following the Derby, bringing music by Clyde McCoy and his orchestra to WCAE at 6 o'clock. It is planned to broadcast the microphone song of the notables present at the Brown Hotel celebration, including the winning jockey.

Floyd Gibbons before an NBC microphone. He discusses the Hawaii situation over a nation-wide NBC network, including WCAE, tonight at 11:15.

May Singhi Breen and her husband, Peter De Rose, feature an indoor golf course at their informal parties. The Mills Brothers wear the same kind of suits, neckties, hats, shirts and shoes. Greta Garbo has promised Buddy Rogers to be present when he opens the Pennsylvania Grill, May 15.

Program Pointers

A program of semi-classic works by American composers, presented as a feature of National Music Week by Irene and Mathilde Harding, NBC's popular "Twenty Fingers of Harmony" team, on KDKA tonight at 10:30. The program opens with a medley of Victor Herbert melodies, including "Kiss Me Again," "A Kiss in the Dark" and "When You're Away." Harvey B. Gaul's "Yasnaya Polyana" and Charles Grant's "Children at Play" also are heard. Irene who is remembered as one-half of KDKA's "Twenty Fingers of Sweetness" duo, and her sister are former residents of Washington, Pa. They are heard every Saturday night at the same time over an NBC network.

A raw beefsteak struck by a raw egg rings like a bell, and a full blown rose, a slice of baron, a drop of writing ink, a feather and a Swiss music box register their complaints when they are frozen to a temperature 200 degrees below zero during the New York University scientific magic program on WJAS at 8.

Leola Turner, dramatic soprano of the Chicago Civic Opera Company, is guest artist in the civic concert on WCAE at 8:15.

A Mississippi packet boat race figures in the "First Nighter" presentation of "The Southern Belle" on KDKA at 9:30.

"Out of the Darkness," the story of the cure or treatment for pernicious anemia, as set down by Dr. George R. Minot, of Boston, is dramatized in the Danger Fighters program on KDKA at 8.

Russ Columbo leads his orchestra in a program over WCAE at 11:03, while a half-hour of dance tunes by Don Bester's Hotel New York Orchestra at 11:30 follows Floyd Gibbons' talk.

Fan Fare

The proverbial ill-wind favored Gertrude Reynolds, secretary at KDKA, recently when Frederick G. Rodgers, program manager, asked her to pinch-hit for an accompanist who had been unavoidably detained. Miss Reynolds, an accomplished pianist, had never broadcast before, but she applied herself to the task and as a result won a place on KDKA's program. She presents her second piano recital since her impromptu debut Tuesday afternoon at 12:10.

COX TO OPEN FARM 'TOWN'

Early next week Father Cox will announce the location of his new farming community, to be known as "Coxtown." It will be a tract of land of no less than 100 acres in area. The fertility of the soil and location, such as will be easily available to the unemployed, are among the factors being considered in making the selection. It is expected that the first spadefull of earth in "Coxtown" will be turned before the end of next week.

Father Cox

In the meantime the Father Cox-Sun-Telegraph Home Delivery Drive, by which this friend to the needy will get a liberal commission for every new order for the delivery of the Sun-Telegraph, is going along with gratifying results.

The funds thus secured will help to feed from 2,500 to 3,000 unfortunate in his daily breadline at Old St. Patrick's and will also help to furnish baskets of food for hundreds of Pittsburgh families in distress.

If you wish to help Father Cox, send in your order either to Father Cox or to the Sun-Telegraph, to have this paper delivered to your home by carrier. A subscription blank will be found in this issue.

LEVY ON BANK STOCK UPHELD

Judge Nelson McVicar in Federal Court today held, in an opinion that Mrs. Zoffie M. Eggers, of Shady drive, Mt. Lebanon, a stockholder in the closed Bank of Pittsburgh, N. A., is liable to assessment of $300 on six shares of capital stock.

The opinion was given in an action brought by the receiver for the bank, C. O. Thomas, who sought to recover $360 as assessments on six $50 shares under direction of the Comptroller of Currency.

Mrs. Eggers, in her affidavit of defense, alleged failure of the comptroller to bring about performance of an agreement whereby the Mellon National Bank would take over the affairs of the Bank of Pittsburgh, N. A. was the cause of the closing of the latter bank.

Judge McVicar ordered the clerk of Federal Court to enter judgment in favor of Thomas and against Mrs. Eggers in the sum of $300 with interest from November 24, 1931.

Radio Murder Trial Jury Awaits Testimony of 'Scarlet Hawk'

The prosecution of the trial of Miss Vivienne Ware, charged with the murder of Damon Fenwicke, continues tonight on WCAE.

The fourth session of the trial, now a famous radio drama, will begin at 9 o'clock.

It is likely Dolores Devine, the "Scarlet Hawk," will be recalled to the stand, to explain why she called the defendent a "liar."

During Wednesday night's session, Miss Ware denied she killed Fenwicke. She confessed her love for him, and attributed her agitation the night before the murder to her refusal of marriage to John Sutherland, a boyhood friend, who had that day asked her to marry him.

The jury, and the verdict is in the hands of the radio listeners who are following the testimony, should have some definite reasons, so far, to include in their decision of "guilty" or "not guilty."

Verdicts, to be formed after the trial concludes next Wednesday night, should be sent to the Sun-Telegraph, and should be limited to 100 words.

Whether the mysterious woman who bustled into the courtroom to demand a hearing will get one tonight is still problematical. The defense will call witnesses tonight as the radio drama resumes over WCAE.

The "Trial of Vivienne Ware" will be shown at the Stanley Theater in motion picture form.

Democrats Need 48 Candidates To Sweep Nation

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

With Garner's victory in California in the Democratic preambles it looks like the stalemate is getting staler.

Here's the way they line up: Smith nibbled Massachusetts, Roosevelt swung Pennsylvania and Garner holds the mandate over the Golden State.

At this ratio per man, it would require 48 candidates to sweep the nation.

The Democratic preparation for battle is something like one of our heavyweight champions who used to whip his manager, his trainer, knockout his closest friend and slug a spectator before stepping into the ring.

He called that trying out his punch.

But it seems if you have a punch to try out you should save it for the opposition.

CHANCE FOR ANOTHER WHITNEY SHIFT

LAST YEAR, when Cornelius V. Whitney had to withdraw the favorite, Equipoise, from the Kentucky Derby on account of an injury, victory went to a horse carrying the colors of another branch of the Whitney family, Mrs. Payne Whitney's Twenty Grand. A similar family shift is among the possibilities today, for with C. V. Whitney again forced to scratch the favorite, Top Flight, there is a chance that the honors will go to one of the two horses entered by Mrs. John Hay Whitney, Stepenfetchit or Over Time.

Mrs. J. H. Whitney

Certainly one of these, Stepenfetchit in particular, along with Liberty Limited, Burgoo King and Economic, would appear to have the best chance to land the prize if the new favorite, Tick On, fails to come through. Tick On despite his defeat last week in Maryland, looks to be the class of a field that is below Derby standards in quality, and he also has in his favor the tradition that in every one of the last six years the Blue-Grass classic has been won by the favorite. But it's a wide open race and wild year in sports, and form sheets don't mean a thing. The winner may be a starter hardly mentioned in advance.

AMONG THE STAR jockeys riding in the Derby, Buddy Ensor and Earl Sande, two of the greatest that ever wore silks, will command attention guiding Mrs. John Hay Whitney's entry, Stepenfetchit and Overtime, respectively. Ensor, recently reinstated after a suspension of eight years, leads all riders in winning percentage.

Sande's record is well known. Just a few of the features are that he was the only jockey except Isaac Murphy ever to win the Derby three times; that he won $3,034,858 for lifetime earnings; that he earned $327,375 for a single season's record, and that at Havre de Grace on September 17, 1919, he became one of only five American riders ever to win six straight races in one day.

DUQUESNE UNIVERSITY is not to break into the Big Three in basketball next season after all, unless the request for a game with Harvard is acted on favorably at Cambridge. For the game with Yale that was believed to be all set has fallen through. The New Haven management has called it off.

Yale's action was surprising as well as disappointing to Duquesne's followers, inasmuch as the Dukes had not sought the contest. It is understood that Yale voluntarily offered Duquesne a game in New Haven for next season, and even named the date, February 24, only to withdraw it when the Dukes accepted.

HERE'S THE FEAST of 14 home games that will be spread before the football fans of the Pittsburgh district next fall: Friday night, September 23, Duquesne vs. West Virginia at Forbes Field; Saturday, September 24, Pitt vs. Ohio Northern at Stadium; Friday night, September 30, Duquesne vs. Grove City at Forbes Field; Saturday, October 1, Carnegie vs. Geneva at Stadium; Saturday, October 8, Pitt vs. Duquesne at Stadium; Friday night, October 14, Duquesne vs. Oglethorpe at Forbes Field; Saturday, October 15, Carnegie vs. W. & J. at Stadium; Friday night, October 21, Duquesne vs. West Virginia Wesleyan at Forbes Field; Saturday, October 22, Pitt vs. Ohio State at Stadium; Saturday, October 29, Pitt vs. Notre Dame at Stadium; Saturday, November 5, Duquesne vs. W. & J. at Forbes Field; Friday, November 11 (Armistice Day), Duquesne vs. South Dakota State at Forbes Field; Saturday, November 19, Pitt vs. Carnegie at Stadium; Saturday, November 26, Pitt vs. Stanford at Stadium.*

Johnny Evers

UNTIL THE BRAVES started on their present Western trip, Rabbit Maranville, in his transfer to second base from shortstop, had the coaching of one of the greatest keystone sackers and smartest infielders of all time—none other than Johnny Evers.

"There's nobody who can tell me more about the right way to play second," Maranville said. "Second is easier to play than short, but don't get the idea I think I know all about second-base play. I've found myself out of position several times this spring."

EVERS DECLARES RABBIT is playing the best second base in the league right now. "The only gent who even looks to be in his class is Hughey Critz," he adds, "and I have my doubts about his arm, where you never worry about Rabbit's India rubber thrower."

In praising the present Boston club, Evers goes so far as to pronounce it more of a great team in the making than the one with which George Stallings won the world championship 18 years ago.

HANDBALL'S NEW KING at the four-wall game, Angelo Trulio, of the New York A. C., is called a worthy successor to Al Banuet, who retired as national champion to enter professional boxing. Trulio, 25, uses an overhand service and is famed for his underhand left lob shots. He also digs them up from close to the bottom of the front wall and can make hills on the fly with either left or right hand. The new champion, who first learned to play at the Handball Club of New York, had to reshape his game when he joined the New York A. C. two years ago, the regulation courts at the latter club being 16 feet longer than those on which Trulio was originally schooled.*

JUST AS SHE did while in Pittsburgh last summer, Helene Madison, swimming queen, has made a big hit on the coast as being refreshingly different from the temperamental stars. On the morning of the day when she was to defend her 100-yard national championship she swam a heat. Then the movie men kept her in the water more than half an hour, making the same shots over and over.

In the afternoon she retained her title. Then the photographers got her again. She had to fake the finish of the hundred with Josephine McKim. She had to pose this way and that way. Through it all she was gracious, friendly, considerate. And then she raced up and down the sidelines cheering Buster Crabbe on to victory in the 1,500-meter free-style.

ADMITTEDLY ONE OF the greatest pitchers of any period in baseball, except against the A's, to whom he has lost seven straight games since he defeated them 15 to 0 on August 14, 1930, Wes Ferrell seemingly has one rival whom he can't beat.

Lefty Grove

That rival is Lefty Grove. When Connie Mack's star southpaw halted Ferrell's early winning streak at five straight Thursday, he was only running true to form, for he has never lost a game to Wes.

THOSE TWO PITCHING topliners did not meet in 1929 or 1930, Ferrell's first two seasons in the American League, but last year Mack sent Lefty in three times to oppose the Cleveland crack and Grove was victorious on each occasion. Thursday's win made it four straight for Grove. An odd feature is that in each of the four games in which Grove defeated Ferrell the Indians scored three runs. Last year's scores were 4 to 3, 6 to 3 and 4 to 3, and on Thursday the count was 15 to 3. It doesn't matter much who pitches for the Indians when they face Grove. They appear to be Lefty's favorite prey. Thursday's victory was his eighth in succession over them since June 11, last year, and prior to that he had a run of 11 straight against them. Since he lost three in a row to Cleveland in 1927, Grove has beaten that club 19 games in 20.*

FOOTBALL CLINIC TO PRECEDE CARNIVAL

By JESS CARVER

With its outcome never more in doubt and its entry list heavy and of formidable strength, the twenty-fifth annual University of Pittsburgh track and field champion meet is booked for the Pitt Stadium this afternoon. Just to start the meet off on the right foot, Dr. John Bain Sutherland, Pitt's head football coach, will put on a gridiron clinic on the practice field gridiron this morning.

While a host of scholastic track and field stars are competing here in the silver anniversary of the Pitt meet, another heavy entry will seek honors in the third annual Geneva College Interscholastic relays at Reeves Stadium, Beaver Falls. Between 50 and 60 schools have entered the Pitt carnival, and 41 are claimed for the Geneva meeting.

OUTCOME IN DOUBT

A year ago squads from New Castle and Warren, O., tied for the team championship at the Pitt meet, with 12½ points apiece. Today, New Castle, Connellsville, Boardman, O., Butler, Akron South, Washington and East Palestine appear to be in the running for the honor, with six or eight possible dark horses ready to step in and accumulate chief honors.

Tre feature of the meet will be the 100-yard dash, with a fine silver trophy the prize to the victor. Giles, of Washington; Surdorh, of McKees Rocks; Stafford, of Erie East; Heaver, of Boardman; Taylor, of Beaver; Whipkey, of Connellsville; Arneman, of Erie Strong Vincent; Malarkey, of McDonald; Redd, of Uniontown, and Croft, of Sharon, have been set aside as heat leaders in this event. Croft, the Sharon speedster, rules a slight favorite to show his heels to the field in the final dash.

Existing records are considered to be in considerable danger, especially in the shot, javelin, discus and pole vault. The cinder marks are conceded to be more or less safe.

DUKE CLINIC SUCCESS

Yesterday, Coaches Elmer Layden and Joe Bach, of Duquesne, staged a highly successful gridiron clinic, attended throughout the six-hour session by more than 1,500 college and high school coaches and players.

Among those in attendance were Cam Henderson, of Davis-Elkins; Hank Day and Pete Henry, of Wash-Jeff; Howard Harpster, of Geneva; Waldo Tippin, of Allegheny; Frank Wolf, of Waynesburg, among the college coaches, and Ed Paulie, of Swissvale; Nate Lippe, of Aliquippa; Moe Rubenstein, of Ambridge; Weimer, of Elkins; Cox, of Washington; Schumacher, of Carnegie; Elmer Carroll, of Wilkinsburg; Earl Loucks, of Greensburg; Jock Rosenberg, of Rankin; Johnny Reed, North Braddock; Mose Lantz, Scottdale, and Lee Berkman, of Monaca, of the high school ranks.

In a practice game, the Duquesne second-string eleven defeated the first stringers, 7 to 2. Dexter Very, well-known grid official, interpreted the rules for the gathering. At a dinner in the grill room of the K. A. C., following the activities on the Bluff practice field, Hank Day, of Wash-Jeff, talked on backfield play, and Joe Bach, line coach at Duquesne, gave out a few pointers on line play. Judge John Egan served as toastmaster.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: THE FRENCH SICKNESS CATCHER—Paul Scarron (1610-1660), famous French poet and dramatist, was appointed malade en titre (official sickness catcher) of the reigning French Queen, Anne, widow of Louis XIII. He was paid a pension of 5,000 livres for filling this curious office "with integrity and capability" (as he claimed). Five thousand livres are equal to $1,000 at the strict rate of exchange. But the purchase value of the day was much higher than it is at present. According to present-day standards, Scarron received about $4,000 a year for life to catch every sickness that might threaten the Queen. He drew this pension for nearly 24 years. A ONE-MAN BUILDING JOB—Stivichall Church, near Coventry, seating 100 people, has the unusual distinction of having been built entirely by one man. The name of its lone builder was James Green, a stone mason, of Coventry, who undertook the task as an act of penance. The construction required seven years.

TOMORROW: THE MAN WHO SPLIT THE WORLD IN TWO.

"Believe It or Not"—If you can write 'em for Ripley you can win your choice of a Curtis-Wright Monoplane, a Rockne Six deluxe sedan, trips to Quebec or Cuba or your choice of other grand prizes. See announcement of the "Believe It or Not" contest on another page of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph today and further details tomorrow.

SPENCER READY TO OPPOSE PHIL TODAY

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Too young and therefore, too green for first-class major league competition, the Pirates are in the cellar where they are apt to remain until Old Man Experience kisses their boys with that touch which he alone can impart.

With all the regulars save Capt. Traynor below the .300-mark, and some of them below .250, the Gibson entry is playing in a stride inappropriate to its years—the players are jammed with ginger, but they are making mistakes, errors of omission in multiples.

The ledger of the Pirates this morning shows eight defeats in their last nine games, and if you analyze each setback you will find that one kid or another was out of position, confused, off balance or gone haywire in some other direction just at a time when the winning run was at stake. But that's the way with a rookie, and you cannot charge it with all the inherent skill you can gather together.

The Phrateless Phils are the latest to add to the cellar cares of the boys. With Bill Jim Elliott up the officers lowly lads from Philadelphia measured the Pirates for a defeat in the initial game of the series, and the Quakers are eager for the second and last clash scheduled for this afternoon.

SPENCER READY

Manager Gibson has Glenn Spencer and Eri Brame ready for today's fracas. Spencer is the first choice, but Brame has shown better form in the past few days. If he does not twirl today he is certain to swing into action against the Braves, who make their bow here on Monday. Roy Hansen, lanky southpaw recruit, is due to twirl for the Quakers. Elliott's success yesterday probably will influence Manager Shotton in favor of the recruit.

Bill Harris swapped punches with Elliott yesterday in a clever way, but loose work gave the invaders the margin they needed to cop the battle. The score was 4 to 2. Elliott thus resumes his mastery over the Pirates. He trimmed them five times as against two setbacks last season.

Elliott drove in the first run of the game in the fifth when Harris apparently laid one in the groove for the big pitcher. The Buccos took the lead in the seventh. Tony Piet's clean hit scoring the tying run. Vaughan uncorked a screeching hit to score Piet in the inning. The Quakers forced a deadlock in the eighth, and in the ninth, with two out, scored two runs that sank the Freebooters.

PIET MISCUES

Piet, extremely clever around second, a great hustler and a deserving lad if ever there was one, was out of position in the inning when Mickey Mallon scratched a hit that opened the way for two runs.

Catcher Bill Brenzel was made to appear loose, but the Philly base thefts were partly due to the leads given baserunners. Bill had a tough day at the plate, however, two of his swat efforts resulting into double play grounders.

Description of Derby On WCAE and WJAS

WCAE, radio voice of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, is to share in the broadcast of the Kentucky Derby, turf classic to be run at Churchill Downs this afternoon.

Graham McNamee, assisted by Clem McCarthy, will come on a WEAF-NBC hookup at 6:45 (Pittsburgh daylight saving time) and will paint a word picture of the stirring event until 7:30. WCAE is to be on this hookup.

SCHOOL LEAGUE LEADERS WIN

By JULIUS LEVIN

The City League race tightened up and McKeesport demonstrated once again that it must be ranked ruling favorite to retain its W. P. I. A. L. title as the district scholastic baseball nines resumed action yesterday.

In the City circuit, Schenley blanked Allderdice, 7-0, with Greenberg, Schenley hurler, giving up but one safe hit. Schenley's hitters collected eight. Smith getting three. In another Section I game, Peabody nosed out Vocational, 11-10.

Oliver won over Carrick, 10-0, in Section II, and Langley defeated South Hills, 5-4. In the Oliver-Carrick game, the victor garnered three hits and the losers one. Canning hurled for Oliver.

McKeesport, given a stiff battle Tuesday by Turtle Creek in the W. P. I. A. L., came back yesterday to wallop Elizabeth, 19-1. Carnegie remained in the running by defeating Dormont, 8-5, and Turtle Creek beat Wilkinsburg, 7-5.

Kiski and Shady Side turned in triumphs in the Interscholastic Golf Conference. Kiski blanked Carrick, 18-0. Shady Side defeated Wilkinsburg, 15-2. Sewickley won over Arnold School, 15-3, and Peabody nosed out Oliver, 9½ to 8½. The McKeesport-Bellevue match was postponed.

Mt. Lebanon's tennis team defeated the Tech Plebes, 7-0, for its second shutout victory in as many days, and the Bellevue track and field team downed Etna, 49-37.

FIELDS BEATS FIRPO

LOUISVILLE, May 7.—(AP.)—Jackie Fields, world welterweight champion, decisively outpointed Henry (Young) Firpo, Louisville middleweight, to win a newspaper decision last night in a 10-round non-title bout, feature of the annual Derby eve fight card. Fields weighed 151; Firpo, 156½.

RING CHAMPS CROWNED

NEW YORK, May 7.—(AP.)—Out of a bewildering barrage of leather fired by 150 aspirants for national amateur boxing championships emerged today three outstanding contenders for Olympic honors.

All eight champions crowned in Madison Square Garden last night had to be good to survive three days of gruelling fisticuffing, but standouts were Lou Salica, of New York; Eddie Flynn, of New Orleans, and Fred Feary, of Stockton, Cal.

Salica and Flynn were favorites from the start in the flyweight and welterweight divisions respectively and their final round triumphs thus were more or less expected. Flynn, a dental student at Loyola University at New Orleans, won the welterweight title a year ago, and outclassed the 147-pounders so badly this time that he got scarcely more than a workout in any of his matches.

Salica has been regarded for some time as one of the finest mateur flyweights in the country.

Feary's victory in the heavyweight class, however, came as a distinct surprise at least to eastern experts who ha installed John Kilcullen, of Gale, as the favorite.

New York made off with three individual titles; the Far West with two, and the Mid-West, South and New England one each.

112 pounds—Lou Salica, New York.
118 pounds—Jimmy Martin, New York.
126 pounds—Richard Carter, New York.
135 pounds—Nat Bor, Fall River, Mass.
147 pounds—Eddie Flynn, New Orleans.
160 pounds—Fred Caserio, Chicago.
175 pounds—Homer Brazda, San Francisco.
Heavyweight—Fred Feary, Stockton, Cal.

Charley Crovatta, of Uniontown, National junior A. A. U. and A. M. A., 147-pound champion, was beaten in the semi-final round by Flynn, defending champion in the class.

One of the many decisions that have failed to please the crowd gave Jim Perrin, of New Orleans, an edge over Tony Gamble, of Erie, in the second flyweight semi-final.

CHISOX SIGN STAR

SAN FRANCISCO, May 7.—(AP.)—Clarence Fisher, 18-year-old baseball phenom and a student at the University of San Francisco, has been signed by the Chicago White Sox. He will report immediately to the American League club.

FRANCHISE SHIFTED

INDEPENDENCE, Kan., May 7.—(AP.)—Transfer of the Independence baseball club of the Western Association to Topeka, Kan., has been ratified by the league, it was announced today. Frank Isbell will continue as president and owner of the club.

RAYEN VICTOR

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., May 7.—Rayen High, of Youngstown, defeated East Liverpool High's football team here last night, 12-6.

Nick Altrock Baseball Humorist Says:

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 7.—Well, you don't have to join the U. S. Marines to see the world any more. Just sign up with the Chicago White Sox and you'll do plenty of traveling to other clubs.

Nick Altrock

Why, carloadings increased last month just from crates of White Sox players that were shipped to other points. This year the Comiskey club would turn a nice profit if it just took an employment agency's commission every time it put a guy in a new job.

Say, we've got a new menace in the American League this season in those Indians. This is about the first year Cleveland has had a real chance since Grover ran for President.

BRUINS REGAIN LEAGUE LEAD

YANKEES WIN, ADVANCE IN STANDINGS

Associated Press

The Chicago Cubs climbed back to the National League lead when they squared their series with Brooklyn, 5 to 1, while the Boston Braves were dropping a second straight to Cincinnati, 4 to 0.

Lucas pitched a four-hit game for the Reds. Heath and Gilbert led a 16-hit assault on three of McKechnie's pitchers.

GIANTS VICTORS

Tight-fisted pitching of Clarence Mitchell, who held the Cardinals scoreless for seven innings, Harold Schumacher in the ninth featured the Giants' second victory over the world champions, 4 to 3.

In their first two games Phillies hurlers have granted an average of more than six runs per game and to make things worse, the team's offense has been weak. Paul Waner and Gus Suhr alone were hitting over .300 through yesterday's games, in which the Phillies also lost a 4-inning lead from the Pirates.

Joe McCarthy's New York Yankees vaulted into undisputed possession of second in the American League when George Pipgras set the Detroit Tigers down, 5 to 0.

Al Simmons and Roger Cramer provided the punch as the Athletics trimmed Cleveland again, 8 to 2.

CHISOX BEAT NATS

Fred Schulte's home run in the seventh with Jim Levey on base gave the St. Louis Browns their second victory over the Boston Red Sox, 6 to 5.

JOHNNIES BEAT COLTS AGAIN

Huntington and Clarksburg turned in triumphs in the Mid-Atlantic League last night in nocturnal clashes, while the Johnstown Johnnies made it two in a row over the Champion Cumberland Colts.

Huntington defeated Charleston, 6 to 5. Byrd's error enabling the Boosters to win in the eleventh innings. Clarksburg slugged out a 16-to-6 win over Beckley and Johnstown defeated Cumberland, 7 to 1, with Roberts hurling fine ball.

Sports Vignettes

Speaking of "naturals" in sports, how do you like that Pitt-Stanford football game to end the coming season? . . . Another meeting between Pop and Jock. Incidentally, such a game was under consideration last fall as a benefit for the needy at the Pitt Stadium before the Carnegie Tech-Duquesne University contest finally was arranged. Stanford was due in the East to play Dartmouth, and the plan was to have the Glenn Warner-coached squad remain an extra week and take on Pitt.

Derby Day again, and the eyes of the world are turned to the Downs, where a commonplace field goes to the post in late afternoon for a renewal of the most glamorous race in American history. All of the favorites are out, and it's a wide open affair, but still it's the Derby with all of the trimmings . . . Wonder how the great Sande will do on Overtime? . . . Will he notch his fourth victory in the classic? . . . Only Ike Murphy has tied his record of three wins, and that was back in the early days of the 58-year-old feature.

The 12-round bout between Mickey Walker and Johnny Risko in Cleveland next Tuesday night will mark their third meeting. Mickey won both of the first two in Detroit and Miami. . . . There's an automobile race at Langhorne, Pa., today, and in it are four drivers who left a similar event at the same track last year in ambulances for the Trenton (N. J.) Hospital. . . . They are Frank Farmer, Johnny Moretti, Malcolm Fox and Gordon Condon. . . . It's the roar of road that lures 'em back, and the cheers of the crowd.

Tick On, the new favorite in today's Derby, ran unplaced three times in 10 starts as a 2-year-old last year and won three times, was second the same number of times and finished third once. . . . Watch Lucky Tom as a "dark horse" today. . . . They say the reason the Jack (Kid) Berg-Sammy Fuller bout in Madison Square Garden, New York, scheduled for next Friday night, has been postponed is because both boxers are superstitious about fighting on Friday the Thirteenth. . . . Willie Ritchie, former lightweight champion boxer, now is an automobile salesman and boxing referee in Los Angeles.—HARRY KECK

Japs Lead Greece In Davis Cup Play

ATHENS, Greece, May 7.—(AP)—Japan yesterday took a commanding lead over Greece in the second round of the European zone of the Davis cup play, winning the first two singles matches.

Kawahara was carried to five sets before he defeated O. Gatangiotis 4-6, 5-7, 7-5, 6-1, 10-8, while J. Satoh turned back M. Balli in straight sets, 6-0, 6-3, 6-3.

NOVELTY, TRAP SHOOTS TODAY

The Wilkinsburg Rifle Club and South Hills Sportsmen's Association will be hosts at shoots today.

A novelty shoot will mark the Wilkinsburg club's first event of the season at old Dream City Park on the Verona car line near Franklintown road. The competition is open only to gentlemen armed with flint-locks, percussions and other forms of muzzle-loading weapons—pistols, rifles, shotguns or blunderbusses. The shoot will get under way at 1 o'clock, and there will be no range fee. The public is invited and each contestant must bring his own muzzle-loader.

The South Hills event today will be the first of seven tournaments registered with the Amateur Trapshooting Association to be staged by the local organization. The program is to be 100 targets at 16 yards rise and a handicap event of 50 targets. The shooting will begin at 1 o'clock.

GRAYS ON EDGE FOR OPENER

By TOM BIRKS

Sandlot fans have a couple of real attractions this afternoon at Forbes Field, the Homestead Grays will open their season in the East-West League by clashing with the Cleveland entry, in a twilight affair. According to advance dope, the Forest City team is going to give the Grays a tussle. Joe Shoeboats Ware, former Westinghouse High School star, will be playing with the Clevelanders.

In the other feature, the Pittsburgh Crawfords and Dormont clash at Glenville Field. The City League champions probably will draw a capacity crowd into the new stadium, especially if Abe Martin opposes Satchel Paige in a pitching duel.

Paige appears to be one of the smartest lefthanders in the district, and should Manager George Falconer decide to send Martin to the mound in the opener, a worthwhile battle will be flashed.

The Pittsburgh Umpires' Association will hold a meeting at the Hotel Henry Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

The Pittsburgh Cardinals will take the place of the Crawfords at Sharon tomorrow afternoon, opposing Dormont. Owing to a mixup in dates the Crawfords are due to appear in New York, opposing the Black Yankees.

POPEYE OLDACH BEATS SPEIGAL, WINS FANS

by HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

Popeye fans were in their glory as the Moose Temple wound up its boxing season last night.

Popeye (Let's you and him fight) Matty Oldach, Erie lightweight, a near-carbon copy of the fighter of cartoon fame in facial appearance, was the hero of the evening, with a corking victory over an old rival, Joey Speigal, of Uniontown, in the first of two 10-round bouts, a battle that put the main bout to shame for action and thrills.

After losing the first four rounds, and suffering a bad cut on his right eye, good old Popeye (so called by the fans) nailed Speigal with a right to the jaw midway in the fifth round and had him out on his feet the remainder of that session and also had him on the verge of a knockout again in the ninth, winning off by himself all of this time, and then coasted through the tenth round, in which Speigal rallied desperately and reopened the cut on the eye. It was only the second defeat of Speigal's career.

BOJARSKI BEATS TERRY

Lou Terry, of St. Louis, had Frankie Bojarski, of Erie, on the run with his rights to the jaw during the first two rounds of the windup, but then found the latter's southpaw stance and moving tactics and holding in the clinches too much for him and lost all of the final eight rounds, which were so tame in spots that the crowd was yelling for action. Both tried all of time, but their styles didn't blend, and it simply was a bad match. Bojarski was overweight at 139¼ pounds against Terry's 134½, and lost his forfeit.

Jimmy Hogan, third Erie boxer on the card, showed a lot of boxing class and was winning handily over Anson Green, Negro middleweight, of Homestead, until he foolishly elected to slug it out with the latter, and was floored for the count with a left hook after one minute and 20 seconds of the third round of the second bout.

Howard Scott, of St. Louis, featherweight stablemate of Terry, oested Eddie Zivic, of Lawrenceville, in the six-round opener, but Zivic, making his professional debut, gave a very good account of himself.

Between Rounds

Ray Trimble, Rockford (Ill.) middleweight, will be back in town today from Indianapolis, where he bested Dave Shade (Tuesday) night. Shade got the decision, but Ed Willard, Trimble's manager, refuses to budge, should have received no worse than a draw. Ray emerged unmarked from the battle and wants the local promoters to get action for him including Vince Dundee, Young Terry and Ben Jeby.

The real name of Jack Kilbourne, the middleweight sensation of Chicago, is Herman Sundeen. He is of Irish-German extraction, 6 feet tall, a good boxer and a hard hitter. He hails originally from California, but was ramrodding in Australia for two years before invading Chicago, where he clicked with five good nights in as many weeks against Ray Williams, Harry Fuller, Ray Trandeble, Haakon Hansen and Dave Shade, losing only to Shade. He drew $600 in his first start in Chicago and $5,200 against Shade. His manager, Jimmy Carres, who was here booking over the local situation, this week, says Kilbourne will box in the semi-final to the Battling Battalino-Billy Petrolle return bout in the Chicago Stadium, May 30, after which he will come here to campaign against not best 160-pounders or even the light heavyweights.

Matchmaker Jules Rock, of Motor Square Garden, is making a change in his preliminary card for the Leo Massey-Jack Herrera show Monday night. Carina Herrera, another of Tom's out of the second rate, is hors de combat because of injuries, and a substitute will be lined up to take his place against Eddie Hebner, of Clairton. Young Dutch meets Freddie Fitzgerald in the eight-round semi-final and Clem Farris, of Johnstown, has been signed to oppose Ray Wisbaugh, local Negro welterweight, in the opener.

Announcement has been made that Joe Mayer will be managing director of the boxing club that will operate Greenlee Field Wednesday nights beginning June 1. Jules Rock will be the matchmaker.

PROFIT TAKING CHECKS RISE IN STOCKS

Telephone, Eastman, Steel Lose Ground at Start; Trading Pace Slackens

NEW YORK, May 7.—(AP.)—The stock market encountered profit-taking on its abrupt rise of the previous session in the early dealings today.

Losses of a point or so appeared during the first half hour in such issues as American Telephone, American Can, Allied Chemical, Coca Cola, Eastman and Lehman Corporation, while Auburn sagged about 2. United States Steel common lost a fraction, and a 1-point rise in Steel preferred was partly lost. Trading was in light volume.

Washington continued to hold the center of market interest. Financial interests who were greatly encouraged by the action of the Senate yesterday in setting forth a completed revenue bill for study on the floor, and by the action of the House in scrapping the cash bonus bill, found further encouragement today. In particular, they appeared pleased with advices that the President's call for speed in balancing the budget had gained wide public support.

Some commentators also argued that for technical reasons a better market performance might be in order. They pointed to the sweeping drop in valuation of stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange during April to support their argument. This valuation declined $4,191,000,000 to the lowest figure, $20,319,000,000 recorded since the exchange began its compilations on January 1, 1925.

The movement of international capital toward Europe, which has been arrested for a time yesterday, was again in evidence in early foreign exchange transactions today. Sterling cables were quoted at $3.67⅛, up ⅛ cent, while French francs moved to 3.94⅛ cents, up 3-16 point.

SAME DIVIDEND ON CHRYSLER

NEW YORK, May 7.—The Chrysler Corporation declared the regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents a share, payable June 20 to record of June 1. The report for March quarter shows net loss of $2,066,485 after interest, taxes, etc., compared with net loss of $979,927 in the first quarter of 1931.

Gross sales for the quarter amounted to $37,363,443, as against $39,758,600 in the first quarter of 1931.

Current assets on March 31 were $78,421,223 and current liabilities were $15,120,991, cash and marketable securities were $46,210,790. On March 31, 1931, current assets were $83,639,064, current liabilities $16,214,839, and cash and marketable securities $49,977,839.

Predict Shrinkage In Wheat Estimate

WASHINGTON, May 7.—Despite generous and beneficial late April moisture over the greater portion of the southwest wheat belt, the U. S. Department of Agriculture winter wheat crop estimate based on conditions prevailing as of May 1, is likely to show a further moderate reduction from the 458,000,000 bushels officially indicated as of April 1. The report will be issued next Tuesday at 3 p. m.

Railway Net Income 1.57% on Investment

WASHINGTON, May 7.—The Bureau of Railway Economics reports March net operating income of Class I railroads was $32,289,300, or an annual return of 1.57 per cent of property investment, comparing with net of $46,478,184, or 2.25 per cent in March, 1931. Three months' net operating income amounted to $66,028,475, against $108,533,156 in the first quarter of 1931.

TURN IN STEEL MAY BE IN MAKING

Ingot Production Rises Slightly After Several Weeks' Unchanged Rate

By B. F. Fitzkee

Steel ingot production has risen about 1 point to 22 per cent after standing at about 21 per cent for three successive weeks, suggesting middle that a turn may have begun. General improvement however is certainly not indicated when the Pittsburgh district rate is unchanged, the Chicago district is down a trifle, Birmingham has decreased materially and the slight rise in total is caused by increases in other districts.

Marked success has been attending efforts to put fabricated structural steel prices on a steady and reasonable basis whereby the most notable irregularity in the steel market in the last two years would be eliminated. In the neighborhood of 75 per cent of the tonnage being made is going into fabricated structural work.

PRICES STAND TEST

Stabilization of open market prices of the finished products that were irregular became a success weeks ago insofar as there could be success without the test of time. The last week was a particularly important one in this time test, being the first week in which deliveries against certain old contracts were shut off.

A week ago the steel trade was expecting a turn in volume of business after several weeks of no material change. This might be upward, in line with the better banking and railroad conditions lately brought about, or downward, in keeping with the seasonal decrease seen at this time of year in ordinary times. The first viewpoint has received increased support in the past week, while there may not be much in the second viewpoint because the influences that caused spring bulges in active years did not exist this year. When there was no such increase there could be nothing of that sort to lose at this time.

FORD BIG FACTOR

There is much interest in Ford operations and prospects because that represents an individual item of steel consumption involving the greatest opportunity for variation. Other lines all told will hardly vary much except in keeping with a swing in general business conditions. A simple but of course only approximate factor may be given, that every 2,000 a day production by Ford represents about one point in the general steel operating rate. Ford operations are increasing and may reach peak in August.

Railroad buying of steel has proved disappointing. Tin plate consumption prospects have undergone no further improvement in the last two weeks. Fabricated structural steel awards reported in the week totaled some 18,000 tons, about the year's weekly average to date, but the three preceding weeks were light.

BANKERS DUPED BY KREUGER, CHARGE

Magnetism of Match King Swayed 'Wise' Financiers; Esteemed as Economist

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, May 7.—Further revelations this week into the practices of the late Ivar Kreuger indicate the immense power of a personality. Apparently, under the sway of his glamor, men who otherwise have shown prudence, were lacking in elementary alertness.

It seems to me that one of the consequences of the incident may well be to establish a new vogue on the part of bankers, who in effect exercise a trustee function, to verify with original documents the assertions even of gentlemen. The reckless danger of lending millions on the unsupported word of a colorful individual has been fully exposed.

Mr. Rukeyser

Apparently, Ivar Kreuger was one of the most remarkable specimens of human phenomena in post-war Europe. He knew perfectly the mental processes of the continental banker, and anticipated them. For example, in his last visit to New York, when he was near the end of his rope, he greatly pleased the bankers by stressing the theme of conservatism, which was then in favor. For instance, he indicated that in the forthcoming balance sheet he intended to write down assets in line with prevailing conditions, yet would still earn interest on the bonds by an ample margin. This capacity of Kreuger to act and talk precisely as he would have if he had been the man he pretended to be measured his great subtlety of mind.

The bankers declare privately that at the time they not only believed in the integrity of the man, but also had complete faith in the soundness of his alleged business conception. Likewise they were intrigued by his seeming capacity as a diagnostician of the general economic situation.

Friends of the bankers insist that they were duped, and allege that they lost vastly more in their investments with Kreuger than they earned in commissions.

Holland Continues Gold Repatriation

NEW YORK, May 7.—(AP)—Another heavy outward flow of gold, mainly to Holland, was reported last night by the New York Federal Reserve Bank. The day's exports totaled $21,189,300, of which $16,183,300 was destined for the Netherlands.

This, like previous shipments to Holland, is in accordance with the program of the Bank of the Netherlands for repatriating gold reserves held abroad.

Due to a decrease of $13,277,900 in earmark account the net loss to the country's monetary stocks on the day's transaction was reduced to $7,700,200.

Mitsui Bank Plans Loan to Manchuria

NEW YORK, May 7.—A dispatch from Seoul-Korea, said a contract has been signed at Changchun by which the Mitsui Bank interests arranged a loan of 20,000,000 yen to the new Manchurian government through the Bank of Korea. The loan was at 5 per cent, repayable over a 10-year period.

WEEKLY BANK CLEARINGS

NEW YORK, May 7.—(AP)—Bank clearings for the first week of May exceeded those of the preceding week by a considerable amount, although they continue much below last year. The total for all leading cities in the United States, as reported to Dun's Review, of $5,431,799,000 is 44.4 per cent smaller than a year ago. At New York City clearings were $3,562,570,000, a reduction of 47 per cent, while the total for the cities outside of New York of $1,869,229,000 was 37.4 per cent less.

Clearings this week are $1,101,801,000 larger than those of last week. The increase a year ago was $1,297,478,000. Heavy settlements falling due the first of the month will account for these larger figures in both cases. Some of the southern cities continue to make a slightly better showing than most of the larger eastern and western centers. Losses continue quite severe, however, in most instances, except at Atlanta, where clearings show an increase this week.

Clearings at leading cities, as compiled by R. G. Dun & Co., showing decreases as compared with same period a year ago, follow: (Totals in thousands):

MURDER OF THE NIGHT CLUB LADY :-: :-: By ANTHONY ABBOT

CHAPTER XXVII

The laboratory of Prof. Luckner, as I recalled while Neil McMahon was driving us uptown toward Morningside Heights, was a plain room in the rear of a private apartment. Some years before, the old scientist had retired, but at Colt's persuasion had equipped himself with a private workshop which he devoted solely to research work requested by the police department. On many occasions he had been of substantial assistance to Thatcher Colt. In vain the chief tried to get an appropriation to make Luckner's work a part of the official equipment of the department. But this was never done; Colt footed all the bills out of his own pocket.

At the door of the apartment we were met by the professor, a mild little man with a red beard turning gray, reminding one of Bernard Shaw. This morning the scientist's eyes were twinkling behind double-lensed nose spectacles and his wild, scraggy gray hair was waving excitedly on the top of his long, thin head.

"Come right in," the savant invited, shaking hands effusively and laughing nervously. "Once more you skeptics shall see what poor, humble science can do!"

DUST EXAMINED

He led us to a plain room. In the center was a kitchen table over which had been laid a covering of glistening white cardboard. Here the dust and fragments from the bags of the vacuum cleaners had been emptied. The debris had been spread on the cardboard and the whole dumped mass leveled to a fine, thin layer, spread like varnish. Trained on this exhibit was a beam of light from a portable nickel-plated lamp—like the "baby spot" of the theaters—with the additional feature of a belt of mirrors concentrated around the light. Under this light, Prof. Luckner had been examining the mess for hours, peering at it through an ultra-microscope.

"Please show us what you have found, professor," pleaded Colt, in his tone a rising note of eagerness.

Without replying, Prof. Luckner picked up a pair of dainty tweezers. Reaching into a wooden box, which he produced from the pocket of his white linen robe, he nipped something between the steel fingers of his gleaming little instrument. With the air of a conjurer performing a trick he held up the tweezers exposing his treasure.

"I found this in the dust," he proclaimed with an air of pride.

We drew nearer and peered at the two fuzzy, microscopic pieces held in the nippers. What could they be? Prof. Luckner deposited his precious findings on a clear piece of the cardboard, and placed over it a magnifying glass.

"See for yourself!" he invited.

COLT IS PUZZLED

Quickly the Commissioner bent over, turned the screw of the glass, and squinted. With intense interest he studied the almost invisible treasure which the scientist had rescued from a sea of dusty sweepings.

"They look like the thin attenuated bristles of some insect!" declared Thatcher Colt finally.

The professor gave a mighty sigh.

"Exactly, Herr Commissioner!" he boomed. "You should have been a scientist yourself!"

"But bristles of what insect?" urged Colt.

Again without replying—there is no one who loves the romance and drama of a situation more than a cold-blooded, precise scientist, especially a German one—Prof. Luckner opened a drawer in the kitchen table upon which he had performed his mysterious labors. From the drawer, he drew out a long tube which physicians call a specimen jar. It is the kind of glass house in which an appendix often finds a permanent home. This jar was nearly filled with yellow alcohol. It was labeled, and as Colt received the bottle from the professor's long pale hand, he pronounced the legend of the label as if it were an incantation:

A DEADLY INSECT

"Cebtrurus Exilicanda!"

With a startled air Colt glanced from the embalmed thing in the specimen jar to the flushed and proud face of Prof. Luckner.

"What is this?" asked the Commissioner.

"A scorpion."

"A scorpion!" repeated Colt in astonishment. "A scorpion, did you say?"

"The most deadly known to man!"

"Lola Carewe and Christine Quires died from the bites of a scorpion?"

Synopsis

Lola Carewe is mysteriously murdered in her penthouse apartment at 3 o'clock New Year's morning. An hour later the body of Lola's guest, Christine Quires, is found in Lola's room. Christine had been killed first and her body hidden. Dr. Hugh Baldwin attributes both deaths due to heart failure. Guy Everett, Christine's New Year's Eve escort, claims he brought her home at 12:15 and then went, riding alone, on the Motor Parkway. Mrs. Carewe, Lola's mother, denies seeing Christine return. Police Commissioner Thatcher Colt discounts District Attorney Dougherty's theory that Lola was killed by a jewel thief ring she headed and that Christine met the same fate for knowing too much. Vincent Rowland, Lola's lawyer, discloses that Everett loved Lola and was jealous of Dr. Baldwin. The Commissioner telephotoes a picture of a young man, named Basil, found on Lola's dresser, to the Paris Prefect of Police requesting that he identify it and investigate Lola's past. The police are on the trail of Christine's brother, Edward, who left his Rochester home for New York after receiving a telegram New Year's Eve. Christine was to have inherited wealth shortly. Dr. Multooler, the medical examiner, contradicts Dr. Baldwin's statement that heart failure caused the deaths. Everett confesses he lied about riding on the Motor Parkway. He states Christine told him she had found out a plot to murder Lola and feared for her own life because of her knowledge, adding that Dr. Baldwin was involved. The picture of the young man found in Lola's room is identified by Paris police. The scientist employed to analyze the dust garnered from Lola's room telephones that he knows what killed the two girls.

Now Go On

"There is no doubt of it." I have already talked on the telephone with your Dr. Multooler."

My ears were ringing with astonishment. How could such a thing have been done? I remembered the box stuffed with cotton found in the shoe. But who could plot and manage such an unthinkable method of murder? It seemed mad, preposterous—and madder still when I remembered that once Lola Carewe had danced a waltz of her own invention that was called "The Scorpion."

"Tell me about this," urged Thatcher Colt. "I had never understood that the bite of a scorpion was necessarily fatal."

The old scientist wagged his head to one side and his eyes gleamed with the pride of superior knowledge.

"But this is not the ordinary insect," he explained with a bland air. "It caused me a great deal of trouble before I could identify it. Seven Columbia professors have been here this morning to help me out. Fortunately one of them had this perfect specimen; and then I knew I was right!"

PROFESSOR EXPLAINS

Over Colt's shoulder I looked at the dead creature in the bottle. It was light-colored, long-tailed, and was about two inches long, with two enormous feelers at the head, flat at their ends.

"There is an even finer specimen in the Bureau of Entymology in Washington, so I am informed," continued Prof. Luckner. "I have a photograph."

"But where are these creatures found?" interrupted Colt.

"Particularly in Durango, Mexico," Prof. Luckner replied. "They cause about 40 deaths a year in that region."

Colt glanced at me quickly, and at once I began making notes on the professor's remarks.

"What are the symptoms when one is bitten, professor?"

"A stinging, burning sensation like a hot needle being plunged into the flesh. It is a peculiar sensation and is always recognized, even by those who did not see the alacran, as the Spaniards call the scorpion. Within a few minutes the bitten place becomes red, followed by a severe pain in the part affected. In a little while, in some cases it is three or four minutes, often a second or so—that part becomes numb. The tongue becomes thick and it is impossible to pronounce words clearly."

Colt glanced at me. Our thoughts must have been the same. Again we were living through those moments of agony when he had found Lola Carewe in anguish on the floor.

"Go on," urged Colt in a low voice.

"For quite a while there is a coma. Then spasms of convulsions of the entire body begin. They are more marked in the legs and back. They are accompanied by a straining and grunting sound. There is more or less paralysis of the respiration. Croup-like sounds come from the throat. These convulsions come in waves and increase in severity. There is a livid pallor to the face. Just before death the pulse is very rapid, the eyes bloodshot, and often the patient spits up blood."

Colt's somber eyes lingered on the specimen of the dead scorpion in the bottle.

"It all tallies," he remarked. "There is no doubt, as you say, that these two women died from the bite of this insect. But where is the rest of its body? You found only these two legs."

"No more," Herr Commissioner," replied Luckner inconsolably.

"And why is it that the scorpions, living or dead, were not found?" added Colt, peering under contracted brows at Prof. Luckner.

The old savant grinned.

"They die when they bite human beings," he explained.

"Then the murderer must have recovered the dead scorpion—"

Prof. Luckner laughed aloud.

"All except those two little legs," he boasted, with undignified glee.

"And where did it bite Lola and Christine, when there were no wounds on the body?"

"It is not for me to answer that."

"Not for you, but for me," said Colt, in solemn accents. "There was no mark on her body, except—"

"I think I could give you a hint!" cried the old scientist surprisingly. "Look here, what I have also done all for the honor and the glory of your unappreciative police department!"

On another table at the farther end of the room lay the clothes in which Lola Carewe and Christine Quires had been clad when we found them. From out of the bundle one piece lay exposed, the bathrobe about which Thatcher Colt had been so curious. Lola's garment that had been buttoned the wrong way.

"There is what you call a clue, Herr Commissioner," said Prof. Luckner. "I cut away the sleeves of all the garments and sheared them open. Here in this one just below the elbow, I found something."

Madge Announces Lillian's Proposed Visit to Brixtons

I stared at Dicky in blank amazement as he asked me if I had thought of the possibility of Mary being the one to attract Charles Owen and induce him to betray his schemes instead of Marion, as Mary's telephone message led me to fear.

"Mary!" I exclaimed, startled.

"Why not?" he countered. "She has the initiative to think of the scheme and the wit and courage to carry it out. She's the devil himself for cool effrontery, and she wouldn't have a single scruple about putting over anything on the gifted Mr. Owen but she would have distinct qualms about permitting Marion to indulge in any dirty work at the crossroads. She sort of figures out that Marion is under her protection, doesn't she?"

"Yes, indeed," I said warmly, with a remembrance of Mary's winsome face when just before their start she had promised to take care of Marion, "and now that you have commented upon it, I believe that you are right," I said. "I remember noticing at the Christmas party that he was quite distinctly attracted by Mary."

"He wasn't alone in that," Dicky said dryly. "I noticed several lads seemed to be afflicted with the same malady."

Yes," I smiled reminiscently, at the memory of Mary's triumphs at that memorable party. But I wonder just what she means to do?"

Enough and plenty," he said. "There's no use figuring out just what particular angle she'll work on. I'm darn glad Lil's gone up there, if you ask me."

I'll echo that," I said, "and now, if you can stay here for a while, I will get Helena Brixton on the phone."

MARY IS SURPRISED

At your service, m'love," he said, rising with me and I hurried out of the room to telephone. It was Mary who answered, a little to my disappointment, for I was not quite prepared to talk to her. However, I reflected, I might as well get the thing over first as last and I spoke quickly, incisively.

Is Mrs. Brixton there?"

"Oh! Aunty Madge," she carolled, not answering my question, "may we stay? Do say we may!"

"Yes, you may stay," I said, then repeated insistently, "Is Mrs. Brixton there?"

"Not just now," she said. "I expect her back, though, any minute. May I take the message?"

It's simply this," I said. "Mrs. Underwood is on her way up to the camp. Would it be possible for some one to meet her?"

"Mrs. Underwood!" she exclaimed. "What is she coming for? Is she afraid we're going to be gobbled up, bodily, by the ogre, or what's eating her?"

"I don't think she's afraid of anything," I said, feeling a little as if I were perjuring myself. She simply felt that she needed a change and counted upon the willingness of her old friend, Mrs. Brixton, to put her up. There's room at the camp, isn't there?"

TALKS TO HELENA

To tell you the truth," Mary said, with an eagerness in her voice that I understood, "there isn't a single vacant bed. Has she started yet?"

"I'm sorry to disappoint you, Mary," I said a bit tartly, "but she has. I want you to take down the time of her arrival in the village, so that Mrs. Brixton can send someone to meet her."

"Honest! Aunty Madge," Mary said with a chagrined note in her voice, "I don't mean it the way you seem to think I do. Of course, I'm awfully glad she's coming. I was just astonished, that's all. I know Marion will be tickled pink, as I am."

"Will you lay aside the color scheme long enough to take down this information that Mrs. Brixton will need?" I asked.

"Oh! I'm sorry, Auntie Madge," she said. "I've been terrible thoughtless. But I have paper and pencil right here. I'll write down everything very carefully."

"That is splendid, Mary," I said, and she followed up her "thank you" with a hurried, "Here's Mrs. Brixton now! Oh! Mrs. Brixton! Mrs. Graham is on the telephone."

When Helena Brixton's beautifully modulated, indolent voice had finished greeting me, I repeated my message from Lillian.

"Oh!" she said, in sharp dismay. "Wherever am I going to put her? Every room is taken."

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

The thousands of boys and girls in the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club seldom see the one man who is interested in their welfare and entertainment more than all others. Yet every Monday morning this one man gets a duplicate report of the Saturday activities of each chapter, studies these reports with care and makes suggestions for changes and improvements that will add to the pleasure and entertainment of his "kiddies." Although he is several years out of knickers and he holds an important position in the business world, his friends all call him "Johnnie," and he doesn't resent it. In fact that smile on his face seems to say "I like it."

Mowod

This "Johnnie" is none other than John H. Harris, general manager of the Pittsburgh division of the Warner Brothers theaters. Mr. Harris looks upon the Junior Komic Club as one of his personal hobbies, and he never overlooks an opportunity, or ignores a suggestion, that will improve the regular Saturday program for his "kiddies." In fact he assumes personal sponsorship for the Komic Club and watches it's weekly activities and growth with keen interest.

INSTRUCTIONS GIVEN—

The regular meetings of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club today were largely taken up with instructions to the youngsters concerning the big free Sunday show, that is to be held at the Stanley Theater a week from tomorrow.

The youngsters that were unable to attend the meetings today will find full instructions in the "Komic Club News" of tomorrow's Sunday Sun-Telegraph.

Joe Mowod, that popular youngster of the Harris (downtown) chapter has just been elected Grand Jester of his chapter for the sixth time. Joe is just one of the many youngsters that devotes all of his time after school to securing new members for his chapter.

DECLINE OF THE WESTERN WORLD

Once I was a social fellow, pleasure-loving, happy, mellow,
Liked to step out of a night, attend parties gay and bright,
Sit around a while and chat. Now when I've laid down my hat
Host and eager hostess seize me by the arm and say, "Oh, please,
"Take your pencil in your fist, just run over this short list,
"Check the words you recognize, then recite them—close your eyes."
Next we play a game of "murder," name twelve words that rhyme with "girder,"
Play charades, "Beast, Bird or Fish," stand on our heads and make a wish . . .
Now I spend my time at home, resting my poor aching dome,
Like a hermit, wan and thin.
By the way, why not drop in
Some evening when you're passing by? I've gotta game you oughta try.

Customs Office Menaced

Every Effort Should Be Made to Save It—Brief Comment on Local News.

In recognition of Pittsburgh's size and importance Abraham Lincoln once referred to this district as "the State of Allegheny." The present administration at Washington, planning to abandon the Pittsburgh customs office, needs to be reminded of the greatness of this community and of its claims for service. It is up to Pennsylvania Congressmen to save the customs office.

Pittsburgh has been a port for the receipt of foreign goods for 124 years. The collections in 1930 amounted to $4,775,117, and we ranked fifteenth in revenue and second in low cost of collection. The river tonnage handled here is four times as great as that handled by St. Louis, which is not to lose its customs office. The revenue collected at Pittsburgh is greater than that of the entire Ohio district, whose headquarters port, Cleveland, is also to be retained.

It looks very much as if the government, seeking economy victims, and picking Pittsburgh's customs house for sacrifice, while letting St. Louis and Cleveland retain theirs, is discriminating unfairly against this city. Perhaps if Pittsburgh voted more independently, instead of always supporting the Republican candidate for President, the administration would give the city better treatment.

The Chamber of Commerce is making an effort to save the port, and every other civic and trade body would do well to join in the fight. If our Congressmen are not influential enough to induce the government to reconsider its plan, it will be a sorry commentary on the administration's regard for Pittsburgh. And it is to be borne in mind that Pittsburgh asks, not a special favor, but simple justice.

The Chamber has also taken a commendable stand in urging that disabled veterans be treated in local hospitals rather than sent to distant government institutions. Let the sick men stay near their families. It is to be hoped that in time the government hospital at Aspinwall will be able to take care of all local disabled veterans.

The federal government has been none too considerate of Pittsburgh's needs. It has taken us 25 years to get the new postoffice after the need was officially admitted. It took us 50 years to get the Ohio River improvement completed. Pittsburgh was passed up as district headquarters for a Federal Reserve Bank in favor of Cleveland. It is about time we took more aggressive action to get our just dues.

There are two proposals now before the federal government for public works that would be of much benefit to Pittsburgh. One is the Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal project, and the other is the plan to establish storage reservoirs at the headwaters of the Allegheny and Monongahela to protect the Ohio Valley from floods and improve navigation. It is to be hoped the government's hostility has been overcome by the visits of Pittsburgh delegations this week.

The pressure of public opinion in favor of a $5,000,000,000 federal bond issue to finance public works as an unemployment relief measure steadily increases. The time is accordingly opportune for unremitting agitation for the building of the Lake Erie Canal and the storage reservoirs. Not only Pittsburghers would benefit, and the aid of other communities should be enlisted.

The State Department of Revenue announces that, to save money, it will discontinue issuing specially numbered or lettered automobile license plates, except those issued to state officials, former officials, certain friends of the Governor, and members of the judiciary, the Legislature and the National Guard. The sensible thing would be to do away with all these special licenses.

We can see no purpose in specially numbered or lettered license plates except the gratification of vanity or the serving of notice on traffic policemen that the automobiles belong to important people. The attempt to impress traffic officers can be nothing less than an effort to win special privileges as to parking, speeding, and the like. It is undemocratic.

The Philadelphia City Council has passed a resolution requesting the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to grant the Pennsylvania Railroad the $55,000,000 loan that the Pennsylvania has requested to help it electrify its eastern lines. If such resolutions are of any avail, the Pittsburgh Council might pass one, too, for Pittsburgh as well as Philadelphia stands to profit by the Pennsylvania's improvements.

It is disappointing, of course, that the Pennsylvania will do nothing on its Pittsburgh terminals even if granted the Reconstruction Finance Corporation loan. It has a good excuse in the obstacles the public utilities have raised. But the Westinghouse Company is to receive large orders for electrical equipment for the eastern lines, and to that extent Pittsburgh will benefit.

Gov. Pinchot said Thursday, before leaving Harrisburg for his home at Milford, that he was undecided about calling another extra session of the Legislature for unemployment relief. He may have some private information which he is not sharing with the public. To most of us it will seem that the need of another special session is no less now than it has been for several weeks.

Of the many days of special observance that have been established in recent years there is none more praiseworthy than "Mothers' Day," which is to be observed tomorrow. In honor of this occasion the Sun-Telegraph will publish some attractive photographs of local mothers in the Gravure Section of the Sunday paper. There will be a page of pictures of interesting babies, too.

Al Capone was locked up in Atlanta this week, but criminal gangs continue their activities in the big cities. An exposure of their methods will be found in the story "By a 'Gunman's Moll,'" which starts tomorrow in the American Weekly, distributed as a supplement with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. The magazine contains many other features also worth your attention.

More than 2,000 persons in the Pittsburgh district submitted "Believe It or Not" ideas during the first two days after the opening of the Ripley contest by the Sun-Telegraph. One of the great beauties of the competition is that the astounding facts which capture the awards are just as likely to come from one person as another. Almost anyone who gives a little thought to it can think of one of the paradoxical or strange things that have made Ripley's work so popular.

Lost in the Dismal Swamp

Turning its back on the paths that lead to Prosperity, Congress continues to muddle about in the mire of the Deficit, stubbornly refusing to hear the wisdom of statesmen while it heeds the pleas of demagogues.

A general sales tax would entirely solve the immediate taxation problem in an ORDERLY, SYSTEMATIC, EFFECTIVE manner. It is the MOST EQUITABLE and the LEAST BURDENSOME of all forms of taxation, and would eliminate nuisance taxes and render an increase in income taxes unnecessary. Nothing could be more disastrous to the economic condition of the country than to increase income taxes and so diminish incomes at this time.

With the Sales Tax, the legalization and taxation of light wines and beer would balance the budget and revenue-raising worries would cease.

Other countries, notably Canada, and many of our own States, have tried the Sales Tax, profited by it and incorporated it as an integral part of their tax systems.

What others have done, WHY CANNOT WE DO?

The country regards it as high time COURAGE and STATESMANSHIP supplanted DEMAGOGUERY, PICAYUNE POLITICS, TIMIDITY AND STUPIDITY in the halls of Congress.

Bankers' Timidity

Their Selfish Hesitation to Extend Credit Is Holding Up Economic Recovery.

By JULIUS G. BERENS
Financial Editor, New York American.

THE bankers are speaking:

"For bankers to engage in an expansion of bank loans or to embark upon a policy of easier credits in the hope that sound business would follow would merely be to add to the present difficulties."

Thus the economic policy commission of the American Bankers' Association addresses the public.

Thus the bankers seek to defend their selfishness and timidity in failing to expand credit.

Presumably the commission speaks for the banking community as a unit, but we suspect that its declaration hardly meets the universal approval of individual bankers.

There must be some bankers who see beyond the tips of their noses.

It cannot be that all bankers have lost faith in the country.

Surely such a defense of banking practice can come only from:

1—Bankers who indiscriminately loaned money for foreigners to the tune of billions of dollars.

2—Bankers who serenely kept pouring depositors' money into an already fantastically inflated stock market.

3—Bankers who permitted and abetted the unconscionable over-capitalization and over-borrowing which finally led to the inevitable debacle.

They know that bank loans are tied up in securities which are now only a mere fraction of the peak total.

They know that billions of dollars in bank credits have been liquidated.

They know that billions of dollars of bank credit formerly at the command of business are today locked up in bank vaults, or, worse still, in the cowardly and selfish inactivity of bankers themselves.

Commodity prices today are lowest since pre-war days.

Security prices are back to nineteenth century levels for a great many stocks and bonds.

Deflation is running riot.

Unemployment has reached startling proportions.

Private and public charity have reached the breaking point.

Revolutionary economic thoughts are running through Congress, all, however, at least aimed at relief.

YET the bankers calmly proclaim:

"Unfortunately general trade and industry have not shown the regenerative strength hoped for. A view of this unfairness to the banks has been created to the effect that business has not started a revival largely because the banks remain overcautious in respect to extending credit. As practical bankers we know that this as an indiscriminate indictment of banking as a whole is groundless.

"Policies of prudence on the part of bankers instead of hampering business recovery ARE THE HIGHEST FORM OF PUBLIC SERVICE THEY CAN RENDER UNDER EXISTING CONDITIONS."

The Federal Reserve management is on record accusing the banks of undue timidity in extending credit.

Every credit-expansion program under orthodox procedure is doomed unless the banks co-operate.

The bankers have spoken.

However, under such critical circumstances have the bankers nothing more encouraging, nothing more constructive to say?

Women—And Other Women

You can always tell when a girl has decided to marry a man by the way she changes all her views on the loss of "economic independence" and the importance of "living your own life."

* * *

In these days it seems a pity for a girl to waste so much artistic effort in painting her lips before going to a party. They'll get all crooked in the taxicab, anyhow.

To a man the most interesting woman is the one who falls in love with him, now and then—not the one who remains in love with him all of the time.

* * *

When a girl closes her eyes and sighs, it is not always a sign that she is unhappy, but more likely a sign that she is trying to warm over the memory of some man's kiss.

It was not the size of Cinderella's foot, but the size of her brain that won the Prince. She was the canny sort of girl who knew enough to get out of the picture before the bell rang.

"Woman detests a serpent through professional jealousy," says a masculine cynic. But that doesn't explain why a man detests a crooner—unless he feels that the radio singer is trying to steal the glamour from his bath-tub carols.

Freedom for husbands and wives may be all right theoretically—but there's no sense in giving a man plenty of rope and then handing him a pocket-knife.

A man will forgive a woman for shattering his illusions, wrecking his digestion and wasting his money—and then fly into a brainstorm because she folds his newspaper the wrong way or hangs his trousers upside down over a chair.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, May 7.—I've just had a dip in the surf which concludes my surf dripping for this year of grace, thanks. I'm a creek person anyway. In a fancy city bathing suit I rate several notches under zero. But on the end of a log, O nos! I'm a good speller and-sum fairly well, too.

I wasn't half way across the beach until some smartie, jerking his thumb at me, hailed: "Hey, Mike, get a load of Gwendolyn!" The scum. Beaches always attract the overflow from the pool rooms. You'd think my bathing costume was flounced with lace. Or run with baby ribbon.

It's an ordinary suit—perhaps a little red upstairs, but the trunks are a modest green. You can't let yourself go altogether in bathing costumes. I have to save a few colors for business wear. And, of course, when I go back home. It is then I give until it hurts for the locals.

When I go out to swim I want to swim. But does anyone else? No, they must throw a big medicine ball around, play baseball or cover each other with sand. You can do all that in the backyard. Bathing these days is just a way to show off your figure of which I have none to speak about.

I wasn't built for beaches. I look dandier neck deep in water. From the way it smells there must be a sick eel around somewhere. I wish I could hide my feet. Nothing you can do for old feet. Young Apollo wants to show me how hard he can throw the medicine ball.

So I must cope with that. My coping days really ended with the market crash. You know something! Want in on a secret? Straining for the medicine ball has done me no good. It might happen any moment. The puckering string holding my pantalettes is not what it was.

But go ahead. Certainly. I'll play leap frog and I hope it happens while I'm in mid-air. I'd like to shock Countess Sourpuss over there with her lorgnette under the big sun parasol. And see that? While I'm looking at her somebody socks me in the mush with the medicine ball.

* * *

I don't care to play anymore. Go on with your childish games. I'm off for my dip. Loll there and gape, offsprings of the beaches! Titter as I pass. I know I look like something the cat dragged in. But I haven't been well lately. My side hurts. "This is what the public wants—the higher type of columning." You should see me when I'm all filled out and my hair brushed back slick like Harry Silvey's. What care I for sniggers? They sneered at Columbus when he put out to sea.

* * *

The water is a bit coldish. Not that it matters. Anyway I like to stand at the sea edge in reverie. It's the poet in me. Ah, the phosphorous toss of foam. The majesty of the mighty expanse. The skimming gull with a glad cry spirals upward to greet the dawn. That's all the reverie for this time. Tomorrow: "The Dying Swan"—with gestures. I must get on with my dipping. I'll flex my muscles awhile and mosey out to get attuned to the coolth. No use rushing into things. Leave that to bankers. Here's an ideal depth to kinda-inda let-tet myself brr-r. I don't care to dip. I should have been home an hour ago.

* * *

This is cowardly. Remember, you are a McIntyre. A quick plunge and how have you been! But no hurry. The sun won't be down for an hour or so. Those people out on the raft are trying to attract my attention. Probably making cracks about my bath suit. I'll act as though I didn't hear. They might not be my sort. Probably riff-raff. A fig for their guffaws. Make it two and a tangerine.

* * *

Here goes! See you around the bowling alley. It-t-t-t's not bad. Just the first shock. Now for the Old Australian crawl. Is Johnny Weissmuller in the house? Not that I care but he might pick up a few ideas. The raft is further than I thought. But since I cut out cigarets my wind is great.

Like bananas, it's great! I've run out of it already. Of course, the life guard would be looking the other way. I suppose the usual crowd will collect when they untangle me from sea weeds and roll me across a barrel. Still I won't know about that. Just 50 more strokes and I would have reached the raft. Good bye, world! Give my raccoon coat to Bert Lytell. Here I go! Shucks, it's not even over my head.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

SHOULD BACHELORS WITH BANKROLLS BE CHUCKED OUT OF JOBS?

AND SHOULD SAID JOBS BE GIVEN TO CITIZENS, MALE OR FEMALE, WHO REALLY NEED THEM?

"That's absurd," you snort. "Every self-respecting man wants to work and should be allowed to work, even if he has other means besides his salary."

Yes? Then how about self-respecting women? They, too, want to work. Shouldn't they be allowed to hold jobs, even if their husbands can support them?

"A married woman's place is in the home, taking care of her house and children," you say.

But suppose she hasn't a family? Or enough work at home to keep a hen canary busy? Or is able to manage home, family AND job? What then? Lucile wants to know.

Dear Elsie Robinson:

I've been following this "should wives work" argument with a good deal of interest, because I work myself, and my husband does, too. I have a job in a bank. It isn't such a big job—yet; but I'm working up in it, and it has been getting bigger right along. It is an executive job in a small way, and carries some pretty hefty responsibilities, and if I do say it myself I think I give service which is valuable to the institution I work for. They seem to think so, for they have increased my salary, even in these uncertain times. So, of course, I think it would be an outrage for anyone to ask me to give that work up just because I have a husband who is a "good provider."

Well, the other day I ran across a new idea, and it suits me fine. The papers say that the NATIONAL FEDERATION OF BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL WOMEN'S CLUBS IS GOING TO WAR ON BACHELORS WHO HAVE INDEPENDENT INCOMES AND STILL INSIST ON PULLING DOWN SALARIES.

They say the idea is to have these wealthy bachelors removed from payrolls all over the country, and their jobs given to women who have to take care of themselves, or who have dependents to support.

AND WHY NOT, I ASK THE WORLD? If it's wrong for a woman with a reasonable competent husband to want a bigger income, or to want to work on her own hook because she likes it, WHY SHOULDN'T IT BE WRONG FOR THESE FELLOWS TO HAVE SALARIES THEY DON'T NEED?

People have said over and over again that a woman who worked when she didn't have to was "greedy." WELL, IF THAT IS GREED IN A WOMAN, WHY ISN'T IT GREED IN A MAN?

Or are men privileged characters?

I'm all for this idea of running these fellows off the payroll, if they're going to insist on running the married women off.

Of course it'll probably start a lot of loud and agonized howls from all sorts of sources—but it sounds good to me. It's an idea, anyway. HOW ABOUT IT?

LUCILE.

So says Lucile. And now sez you—what?

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

What kind of a listener are you?

When another is speaking do you walk up and down impatiently, waiting for an opening to "get in your say?"

Or are you the still more irritating kind that does not wait for the speaker to finish a sentence, but puts the finishing touches to it himself and then continues to talk.

Much is said about the talking proclivities of women.

But women are more considerate than men in permitting another to make statements without interrupting.

To be sure, the talkative man who seldom has much to say that is worth listening to, is a bore.

The gabby fellow does for some reason beyond comprehension believe that what he presents is more important than anything the other fellow says.

He is like the "life of the party" individual who monopolizes so much of the time that he soon finds himself forgotten when guest lists are made out.

He wonders why people avoid him, but it should be easy to know.

Anything but the chattering sort of fellow.

WHO WAS RIGHT?

By Winifred Black

The banker and the traffic cop had an argument the other day. The traffic cop got the best of the argument at the time, and now the banker is trying to get the traffic cop's job away from him.

The banker told me about it first.

"The trouble with these traffic cops is," said the banker, "they're entirely too fresh. I'll admit that I cut the traffic button, and I guess I was going a little faster than the regulations. I was late to a dinner party, and I had to step on it.

"The cop blew his whistle and I didn't stop right away. I don't know why I didn't, but I just didn't, that's all.

"When I did stop that cop talked to me as if I was a thief with a burglar for a father, and a mother not worth mentioning at all. He asked for my driver's license; asked me where I thought I was going; asked me who I thought I was, anyhow, took down the number of the license and handed me a tag—and you could hear every word he said for half a block.

"People turned around and looked at me, as if I was being arrested for wife-beating, or child-stealing, or something.

"I'll admit I was in the wrong to begin with, but what right did he have to bully me about it? Why didn't he stop me politely and say: 'I'm sorry, sir, but I'll have to hand you a ticket. You broke two of the traffic regulations, and I'll have to do my duty.'

"I'm going to speak to the police commissioners about it. They ought to train their men to have better manners. And if I can get that cop's job, I am going to do it. He needs a lesson, and he'll get it if I have anything to do with it."

The traffic cop is a friend of mine, and he told me about the banker.

"That fellow goes down my beat every day," said the traffic cop. "I've had my eye on him for some time. He seems to think that he owns the street, just because he's got a big car and is president of a bank.

"I can't help who he is or what kind of a car he drives; he can't get away with that kind of thing with me.

"Maybe I did yell at him a little louder than I might; but he looked at me as if I was a worm or something; and besides, we ain't trained to whisper when we make an arrest.

"We never bother a man unless he has done something he had no right to do, and then we treat him just as if he was any other law breaker.

"I was right and he knows I was right; and I'm going to stick to my story and let him stick to his. And that's that."

Both of them a trifle testy, if you ask me.

I wonder if it wouldn't do the banker good to remember that in the eyes of the law he's just a plain citizen; and wouldn't it do the traffic cop good to remember that this traffic business is a bit new to most of us, and that some of us aren't quite used to the ins and outs of it yet, and ought to be treated more like stupid children than like criminals.

I wonder which, of them will come out ahead with the police commissioners — don't you? — the banker or the traffic cop?
